Population Decline, Low Birth Rate - Barbados
By Empress Wuraola Oya

When governments impose homosexual and lesbian lifestyles/tendencies on a population for the long term, attaching sexual preferences to food, housing, jobs, overall survival, and security: acceptance is a foregone conclusion, docility sets in after prolonged practice and the enormity of further punishments for those who refuse to comply, sends a direct message. The 1950s-1980s was a horrible time: shortly after deliberate pauperization was introduced, the Windrush people had left for subsistence since nothing else was available. After over half a century, the decline manifested in unforeseen ways for those left behind, but leading the pack by then was a black parliament. The worst of the worst never saw themselves having to throw open the island's doors to other islands in a bid for continuity, to halt the downward reproductive spiral. Neither will they want to confront and address the root cause which is undeniably attributable squarely to them. Some will say birth rate drops are now global except for a few countries, but we see the extinction theme based primarily on political propaganda and social castration of populations, inclusive of the above.

For far too long, domestic problems associated with tiny, insular societies were dismissed, in favor of boasting about independence, and being the better island in the Caribbean, none of it existed. All the islands remained separate and distinct, little dependent fiefdoms unto themselves sprung up, playing fields for titled misfits, who ultimately swamped everything and excluded, sidelined the more sensible people, the real leaders. There is now a lesson for each incoming group related to the ease with which mandated human extinction is formulated. The so-called best educated in the Caribbean did not know prolonged interference in the natural order of evolving births has dire consequences, never would have thought of it, nor did they care once basic desires were met. No one could appeal to their elementary humanity since they seem to have none, once decked out in colonial mannerisms and protections, after election.

None of the politicians ever thought the hideousness they espouse, the decades long Sodom and Gomorrah public parade, a conga line, would one day return to bite and become a talking point, today is that day. What they cannot see is, it will take at least three generations to level off, and clean up their marinated mess. None of us will be around including the players, but will become their everlasting legacy. However, the island will breathe a sigh of relief and release when they leave. Within the last 15 years, a cabinet bullhorn kept blasting away at the people about the drop in births, but would never associate low rates to their generational activities, started by predecessors. However, eventually they egged on the males amongst themselves with crassness to "go out and breed," their idea of a solution, likened to animals on the notorious breeding farm; and always on the look out for a handy scapegoat by directing women to have more children even though housing needs are never met, land is kept in a bank to satisfy offshore sales as give aways to foreign interests in the next scheme, or dished out to everyone except the people who can populate the island in order to generate tax revenue.

The much needed funds for improving quality of life and island wide services, are then willfully diverted away from the taxpayers, especially the impoverished, and misused to further institute social annihilation of entire communities. Access is allowed only to the shady and well connected to the parliament, and denied to everyone else along with scarce opportunities that should rightfully go to the majority population, but is still hijacked for the politician's selfishness. The scarcity of jobs persists, and the cabinet continues lying that the people are unqualified, claiming they do not have any skills, in order to import others based on who pays them to accommodate the padding of bank accounts; is still ongoing across the Caribbean in some other islands as exposed in the last couple years, denying workers upward mobility, hence those who can run, leave the islands, then excel in other jurisdictions; Therefore, reality check, Black Afrikan lives under colonial management are never meant to improve. The obnoxious request by the former administration, and now this one, to increase births was soundly rejected by a cross section of grounded people, who saw the entire setup. The targets are rightfully incensed at the continued provocation and deprivation handed out by both political parties for an unnecessarily protracted period.

Population Decline, Low Birth Rate - Barbados

Self-entitled ministers in monster roles, are unable to connect the dots surrounding the fragility of fertility, yet issuing political orders to increase births in a rigged society, where poverty is scripted, and the ever present abuse and exploitation are an accompanying shadow. None of this has changed four generations later, only refined. An occupying machinery unable to deliver on adequate education, as advanced knowledge for the people does not play into keeping the status quo intact, with information and the Afrikan story well concealed. Increased benefits to mothers and their children are the focus of repressive discrimination, but yet think they have a right to dictate to the oppressed in neighborhoods that faced neglect for over 50 years by both governments. Where environs continue to deteriorate at an alarmingly accelerated pace, at the same rate the people's money disappears by the billions without accountability or traceability, and they are expected to grin and bear organized thefts against themselves generationally. A substandard existence leading to a direct path to the prison system and judiciary of injustice for young people stagnated by design with no way out. Yet females are brow beaten to give birth under those conditions., in such unstable, mentally unhealthy surroundings.

The problem begins and ends in the parliament as everyone has finally realized. Supporters were hesitant to put the blame where it previously belonged, always accepting the politician's/zoo keepers explanations, many times out of fear, but no more. Buckingham Palace, who initiated the original policies that were never removed by revolving cabinets, but to this day claim the island has political independence; unrefuted but not ever corrected by politicians misleading the people to believe they are the ones independent, a fallacy, voters now know they only got freedom to vote for any liar, but politicians got freedom to do what they want, and take full advantage. Even the man in the street has fingers pointing at them in blame, since administrations refuse to assume responsibility for anything that goes wrong, particularly for all the missing money, land, specifically the negative tactics they legislate against the majority, and still try to pin all the blame on outside elements. The degeneration is always someone else's fault, not theirs, yet they oversee mountains of erosion and debilitation, and are only adept at preserving this colonial museum of living horror, while using loaned titles and diplomatic passports as a shield and would rig elections to prolong. The only other place their competence is registered, and must face demolition in its entirety as another tapestry of democracy lies.

Recently there was a call for 80,000 additional persons on the island, we see several reasons for this, with no benefit to the original people to whom island managers owe reparations for the psychological, financial and social damage they have personally, consistently wrought on the vulnerable and helpless with great delight, disdain and panache. The people should collect on those grave injustices, ministers must not have the freedom to continue the ruinous ravaging of the same group in secret, using them as a buffer for their blood sport, while everyone else goes about their business unaware. It goes without saying, since the cabinet's performance has been so dismal with a small population of less than 280,000, there is only trouble ahead.

Despite all the accolades of certain years when they were "admired" as a beacon of a successful, agreeable, compliant slave society, because creditors will say anything once loans are repaid; and exposure was never a worry. Where will island management acquire the intelligence required to successfully take care of the needs of an over 300K population with the same lack of resources that is permanent, no adequate agriculture production or manufacturing, slave laws and codes still in place; the infused anti-Afrikan practices, a poisonous immovable reality, the sludge that swiftly moves out of the parliament's statue books to blanket, taint everything and protect the resident evil, hand in hand with the solidified corruption for which the island holds titled fame. ### Population Decline, Low Birth Rate - Barbados

Old habits do not die overnight, particularly when the same mindsets are still at the helm, have prospered tremendously from the contamination as is their sworn proclamation "I want money" mantra, by any means necessary, no matter who gets run over, crushed and suffers. It is obvious the begging and borrowing will increase tenfold with any new arrivals to inflate numbers, most of whom will not tolerate the expertly concerted aggressions and punitive crimes against humanity. Then there are the private lives forced on the public every generation, the nauseous tradition exerting immense domination and wielded as a weapon, will not end unless they are all gone. The proclivities have fused into every aspect of bad governance and cannot separate because of the length of time it has been operational. This social disease must never regain a foothold to anchor itself in other people's lives ever again and spread to incoming new births.

Such devastating footnotes in our history must be recorded to prepare everyone, from childhood to young adult on what to look out for from the usurpers and wasters of Afrikan lives who live only for self-gratification, the shabbiest of excuses for leaders. It is our obligation to let them know the first signs to look out for: narcissists who always have a need to hog the limelight, rank themselves over everyone else, disregard the rights of others when begrudging and intimidating, a laundry list of the grotesque.

That is what got set loose on the Afrikan continent to run rampant, an extremely high hazard to the traditional family unit of husband, wife and children, in its most perilous invisible contours. Obviously trying to relive glory days of abhorrence and debauchery, as the now old and decrepit leading a younger crew with upgraded psychotic traits. A fresh start with brand new unsuspecting victims, on a not yet fully defiled stomping ground, a playground much larger than they could ever imagine or hoped for, the more innocent the better where no one knows them, much harder to detect. Prime Minister Owen Arthur, dec. was not the only one to bear the brunt of that invasive savagery.
