Ma'at

"Your right eye is Ma'at, your left eye is Ma'at, your flesh, your members are Ma'at... Your food is Ma'at, your drink is Ma'at, the breaths of your nose are Ma'at...You exist because Ma'at exists and Ma'at exists because you exist." Ma'at is in every place that is yours...You rise with Ma'at, you live with Ma'at, you join your limbs to Ma'at, you make Ma'at rest on your head, in order that She may take Her seat on your forehead. You become young again in the sight of your daughter Ma'at You live from the perfume of Her dew, Ma'at is worn like an amulet at your throat; She rests on your chest, The Divine Entities reward you with Ma'at, for they know her wisdom...

The Biggest Fraud Perpetrated on the Caribbean Region, Afrika and its People in the 21st Century - Barbados' Oil and Gas

By Empress Wuraola Oya

Barbados has always had oil and gas in and around the island, this was known for decades, with the potential for billions of barrels and trillions in cubic feet of gas. Approximately two decades ago, the island won the rights for exploration against Trinidad, in arbitration. An international court demarcated 250 miles outward to the continental shelf as exclusive to the island. Unfortunately, everyone was recently drinking the climate change kool-aid and did not pay attention when people told them it is a hoax by the bajan talking head to reel in followers, supporters and build an adoring cult, so she would seem all-knowing, all-powerful, untouchable and so loved the weakest people would beg her to rule the world, within what she sees as their sordid little lives, and eventually treat them they same way as the people in Barbados, like they are insignificant. So do not be sidetracked with this latest distraction to get rid of the Ebola threat by Barbados, and human trafficking of Afrikans scandals out of people's mouths. There is nothing new about the oil and gas, the people have known the volumes since the 1970s, and have been extracting for household use since the 1800s.

Chapter

16 Barbados v. Trinidad and Tobago (Award of the Arbitral Tribunal, 11 April 2006)

Abstract

The case presented here is concerned with the islands of Trinidad and Tobago, which lie off the north-eastern coast of South America. The island State of Barbados is to the north-east of Tobago. The parties had conducted negotiations concerning the use of resources (principally fisheries and hydrocarbons) in the maritime space between them over some three decades since the 1970s. The chapter concludes that the Barbados v. Trinidad and Tobago case was the first maritime delimitation dispute resolved by way of arbitration under Annex VII to UNCLOS. The entire proceeding lasted just over two years between the Barbadian Notice of Arbitration and the tribunal's Award, demonstrating the expeditiousness with which arbitration proceedings can be completed if effectively managed.

The Biggest Fraud Perpetrated on the Caribbean Region, Afrika and its People in the 21st Century - Barbados' Oil and Gas

However, human trafficking out of Afrika was a priority, quick, easy, tax-free money, with all the connections, experience, and parliamentary protections needed to launder proceeds into personal bank accounts, as has happened for decades; and keep it going generationally, with no one believing Barbados could be so deceitful, because the split tongue says one thing and does the exact opposite on the sly. The enslavement of Afrikans superseded oil exploration, which would take time and the necessity for lots of financing for heavy drilling. Especially when others are paying for particular outcomes. She cared not one iota for those drooling over her nonsense speeches, the goal was already in sight.

Uppermost in criminal minds was also the need to deter ancient Afrikan lineage, ascendants with genuine claims on the continent from proceeding, obviously they have no such linkage, or would not need to do that or traffic Afrikan people, but would take money from anyone to subvert such happenings. The entire plot consisted of muddying the waters with the use of PR and open-ended lies to control the narrative, jumping to the front to be seen, admired, adored and sway people who did not know the most vindictive, heartless western black slaver was on the loose in Afrika, and telling them exactly what they wanted to hear, without delivering on anything, but misusing taxpayer's money to pull off the show.

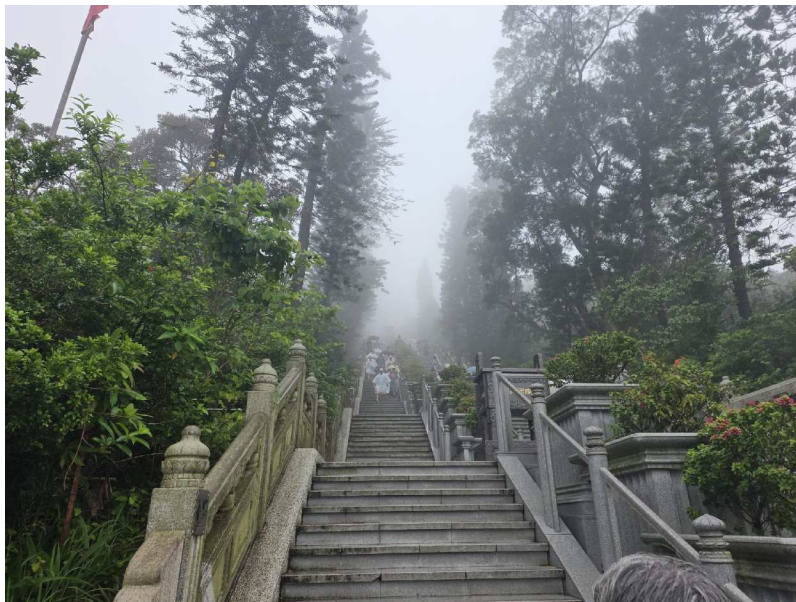

That was how Afrika got fooled, a setup devised decades ago in collusion with Come-a-Long-Comessong sitting in the AU for 21 years, finding out who the weakest links are, who were the greediest and easiest to manipulate; and where to recruit the most easily bought and paid for minions in the population to coerce the innocent and unsuspecting; people willing to sell each other, and who only care about the pittance and false promises they too received. So by the time 2018 rolled around, they were all ready and set to go, after taking charge of the parliament, and armed with diplomatic passports, that is exactly how it all transpired.

The Biggest Fraud Perpetrated on the Caribbean Region, Afrika and its People in the 21st Century - Barbados' Oil and Gas

Some platforms were so enamored, one actually installed photos of Jamaica's Marcus Garvey and Grenada's Maurice Bishop with the beastly insult and disrespect to the two real freedom fighters sitting in the middle modeling a big wicked smile, but it was all a sham. That wrong move garnered lots of anger, but happened because of lack of knowledge, not knowing who is openly lying to their face for their own agendas. Thankfully, the photo was removed, I am sure, after the platform finally found out how cruel the actress was in not caring who was misled or the fallout caused, making her the single most dangerous threat to the Caribbean and the Afrikan continent.

There was an unseen miscalculation, but the trafficking did get off the ground, things were looking up, until they were not, and everyone found out about the flights eventually. Barbados should be made to explain why they continued with the hot desire to enslave Afrikans when it was so unnecessary; despite people knowing what was happening and equally determined to expose the injustice. Although economics to the tune of hundreds of millions of dollars, "I want money," was a motivating factor, it was obvious this was also deeply personal to sabotage a natural order, even if it meant becoming a pariah who underestimated the ancestral strength at play, and did not know who or what they were rushing in front of to disrupt. Barbados needs to respect and stay out of other people's Afrikan ancestry and stop trying to smother and or contain energies to which they have no access as the world's first slave society, that stain will always stay: black impostors will never get such information to sell to the highest bidders. Presidents who collude with traitors cannot help on that score either, no matter how many more years spent trying. So mission failed.

Min was one of the most ancient Kemetik Ntchru, a diety of fertility."

"Who leads the world in modern slave trade today in West Africa

In West Africa, Nigeria has the absolute number of people living in modern slavery, with an estimated 1.6 million victims. However, in terms of proportional prevalence, Mauritania leads the region. Modern slavery in the region primarily takes the form of forced labor, human trafficking, debt bondage and forced marriage.

Top West Africa Countries by Modern Slavery

Nigeria: Has the largest total number of enslaved individuals in the region and ranks 7th globally. Exploitation largely occurs through forced domestic work. Forced child labor in agricultural sectors and sex trafficking.

Mauritania: Despite formally abolishing slavery in 1981, it has the highest proportion of enslaved people in West Africa. Hereditary slavery and systemic caste systems continue to trap generations in forced labor and forced marriage.

Niger & Cote d'Ivoire: Both countries experience high vulnerability and prevalence rates, driven by extreme poverty, porous borders and the presence of armed conflict. Which makes populations highly susceptible to human trafficking.

Barbados Voting for Human Trafficking/Slavery as the "Greatest Crime Against Humanity" at the UN and then Continue, Enable and Expand on that Greatest Crime

All of the above and more are still involved in slavery, but especially in Nigeria Barbados was more than happy, ecstatic to exploit the deficiencies. While feeding admirers the fake pan african spiel which they could not upkeep, since they never were, and were only play acting as usual. The penetration of the AU was easy, made easier still when observed and noted that Afrika is decades behind in terms of newer age slavery currently practiced, still archaic, and have no knowledge how to make it undetectable. Barbados is way ahead in that as the world's first slave society, but they can forget about teaching those in the AU so inclined, because we also know the framework and will be sure to write a whole article on the topic outlining all the strengths and weaknesses for the world to read, so that people on the continent and everywhere else will know what to look out for, identify and stop it before it starts.

Unsurprisingly, many of these countries including Barbados voted with all the others at the UN against slavery, but look who is upfront and leading the charge in the illegal crime of human trafficking from the continent and within Afrika, to the Caribbean just weeks later, none other than slavers and reparation seekers, the same UN voters. Further, for those in the AU who may have colluded with Barbados and others against your people, you know who you are and have to know how you are perceived, not in a good light. Many of you are from lines that previously sold out your people through millennia to enslavement and were then enslaved themselves, Many of those bloodlines are still in this region, yet you learned nothing.

The countries that do not condone slavery in any form, should upgrade their anti-slavery laws so that countries like Barbados can never again infiltrate, using such devious, illicit methods and highly offensive tactics. Once the trafficking scandal hit everywhere as it recently did, those upgrades should have been made yesterday. These series and sequences of events must be fully recorded and made part of Afrikan and Caribbean history.
