What are Afrikan Presidents Doing to Combat Any Plans for a Reverse Slave Trade from the Caribbean?

Dessert-Japan

The Book of knowing the forms of Ra and of felling Apep; words spoken by the Neb of the universe, which he said after he took form:

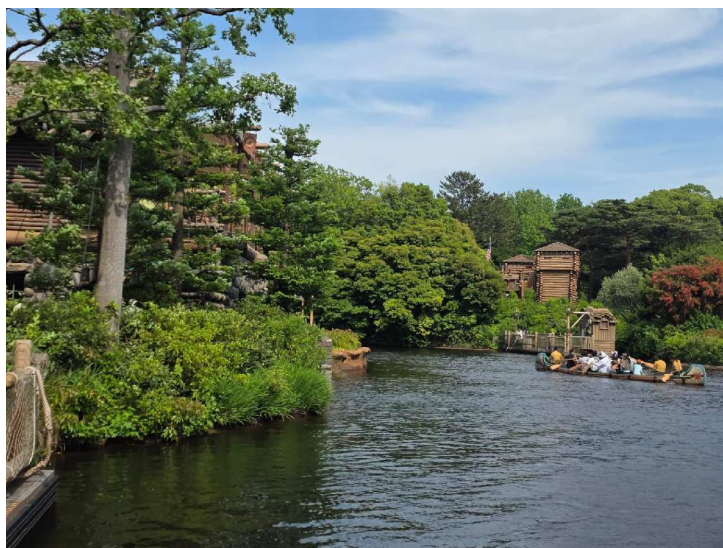

"I it is I who took form (Kheper) as Khepri. I took form; (other) forms took form. All forms took form after I took form. Forms multiplied in emerging from my mouth, before earth existed, before sky existed, before snakes and worms were created in that place...I made all shapes alone, before I sneezed out Shu, before I spat out Tefnut, before any other took form and had acted with me."

Benefiting from the re-enslavement of Afrikans in the West Indies
By Empress Wuraola Oya

We have established there is a concerted effort to rekindle the trade in Afrikans from the continent by the unscrupulous who managed over decades to fast track some islands into the ground with corruption, to the point of nonfunctional, and now the only way they can see out of the mess of debt they created, can never emerge from within the next 50 years, is the re-enslavement of Afrikan people to commit more of the same. Thereby wasting generations of Black Afrikan lives to enrich themselves and others in their narrow world view. In 1948 post emancipation poverty had drenched the islands of the Caribbean and the only way out was migration to the UK, hence the Windrush people were forced to look for greener pastures to survive. Since then, people have escaped the enforced, restrictive labor practices annually over decades and managed to build a life in several other countries with better pay and benefits than can ever be found in Barbados and other islands due to how business is conducted.

Recently, several factors have changed greatly further narrowing the field of opportunities when larger countries slammed shut their doors and stopped easy access to visas. We did not know at the time what these countries knew, that Afrikans were being influenced by every means possible to leave the continent by dangling the promise of no visas required to enter bigger countries once they have babies in Barbados, or acquire a passport, along with other illusions that will never happen. We are now learning they arrived on several islands by the planeloads long before we knew, only to face severe hardship when met with the opposite of the fantasy shaped into their heads. We knew there was a group of politicians desperate to skillfully manage slavery/human trafficking in any direction once they got rich from that scheme. Although they all voted at the UN recently to define slavery as the greatest crime against humanity. Apparently, when they themselves commit such heinous acts, it does not qualify as crimes against Black humanity; and also simultaneously still plan to actively seek reparations in the interim. Somehow this makes perfect sense to them and they fully expect it all to work out in their favor.

Strawberry Slavery

Upon assuming the six-month rotating Caricom chair in 2019 or thereabouts, Barbados was accused of using black agents in the UK and with help from the local labor office to persuade young persons from the Caribbean to pick strawberries in EU and UK. These persons then had to reach out to The Voice media and make videos to get help leaving the horror they were subjected to, the criminal act of slavery, those videos are still available:

This is the replay, but this time with Afrikans as the unwitting targets. Poverty has returned in full force to become a way of life for people on the islands, adding Afrikans to the mix spells disaster, meaning they will never be paid for work, or paid very little. Local people have been complaining for a very long time their salaries are either sporadic or they get none at all, while wannabe slave master types with businesses, and directly connected to the parliament, keep the money that should be going to employees and nothing is done by the government. Therefore, Afrikans with no work permits or employee rights will be maliciously enslaved, and trapped on the island(s) indefinitely. We know the injustices that can occur, the exploitation and violations of human rights without recourse. That is how criminals maintain wealth. The massive loss of generated revenue over two generations, where every bottom-feeder wanted to become a millionaire, has succeeded in pushing the island backward to pre-1970s days. Therefore, they are trying to find a way to climb out of the hole they dug for the people and island with all the mounting debts incurred, and the only people they believe should pay for what they have done are Afrikans.

Strawberry Slavery

Job creation was never a strong suit of either government due to maintaining control over voters, the old system of who can get jobs based entirely on which party they voted into the parliament, or starve, was always the deciding factor, and not about to change ever. Where mealy-mouthed politicians never wanted to lose their grip on that authoritarian mechanism, but has now gone to extreme lengths to ensure thousands allowed into the island are beholden only to them; so in rushing to open the island's doors to everyone, the fact was overlooked that no new jobs created means the local people continue to have none, or was that the plan all along, it also means not enough jobs are available for new arrivals either.

The youth remain idle as has happened since the 1970s, but they in all their lack of wisdom can boast about generating an influx of over 15,000 people to sideline the local population, who now are unable to seek any pastures green or otherwise, since the "tek de visa," outburst aimed at the US. This resulted in handing over a paradise of low paying jobs to beastly minorities so they can gain financially, once again; and push out whoever is left with no work prospects. Then call themselves genius, especially if they are planning a reverse slave trade to force the local population to seek work in Arab countries under the Kalafa slave system, as they already suggested without describing in detail what they are coercing local people into, another ambush.

Asserting Ancestral Instincts, Rights, Self- Esteem and Confidence

We are in a different place and no island management can impose low level plans to keep us decades behind in terms of progress or what we envision for our future generations. Our first instincts are to disrupt any endeavors to harm us and our incoming generations. Politicians are the ones responsible for where the islands find themselves, by misusing and abusing the diplomatic franchise to avoid accountability, to commit crimes that would ordinarily see them in prison for decades, to dodge doing their jobs as servants paid by the people, it is their responsibility to reverse the damage they brought into being.

The people should never have to pay for politician's failures, or the billions in debts they knowingly accumulated because they never acted as management/employees but usurpers entitled to take what they want and share with whomever they like once there is something in it for them. The only economic growth they have ever delivered is into their pockets, and hidden in every country that would enable them. There will be push back in the event these bullies believe they will succeed in further nefarious activities against us and our families. We will not leave the situation as is for our grands and great grands to hear the same lies, experience the same inferior quality work ethics, lack of morals, and mirrored results, something has to give.

What are Afrikan Presidents Doing to Combat Any Plans for a Reverse Slave Trade from the Caribbean

Many Afrikan presidents have bad track records in protecting their people from slavers, or safeguarding ancestral lands and resources. Therefore we cannot see them defending us from the likes of Barbados or any of their local/regional slavers in the AU. We have come to the conclusion that unless we file some kind of legal action against these criminals it will be a long battle.

The current Ghana President made all the right noises while at the UN when speaking about slavery/human trafficking "the greatest crime against humanity," the new buzz word as recently defined by over 100 UN member countries, and peppered it with talk about reparations. So what will he do to stop Barbados from carrying out a full on trade out of Ghana and another reversal into Afrika? In a bid to finance the upkeep of politician's unlimited, overly expensive gayful lifestyles, in this region and further afield, at the expense of Afrika and Afrikans. It is beyond obvious a trafficking network was created between West Afrika and Caribbean with Barbados in the lead, and now the top topic on local talk shows. Another flight landed days ago, again reportedly with a second group of pregnant Afrikan women on board, they had to speed up the flights since the cat was let out of the bag. He has the power in his hands, and the legal tools to shut down Barbados' island management permanently from trading in unborn Afrikans, as does Nigeria, and so too other presidents throughout West Afrika. We are watching and will not hesitate to speak out.

Speaks:

I was alone, for the Ntchru were not yet born, and I had committed from myself neither Shu nor Tefnut. I brought into my own mouth, Hekau (the divine words of power), and I forthwith came into being under the form of things Which were created under the form of Khepera."
