"The West Indies Federation existed from 1958-1962. It was formally established on January 3, 1958 and collapsed on May 31, 1962, following political disputes and the withdrawal of its largest members, Jamaica and Trinidad and Tobago.

The union was created by the United Kingdom with the goal of eventually granting independence to the British Caribbean Colonies as a single, unified state. In 1973, the Caribbean Community (Caricom) was formed."

For 68 years the islands tried and failed to come to a consensus on integration, there were always the same power struggles, disagreements, this and that excuse, bickering, oneupmanship. The facade of independence started shortly thereafter, making things much worse. While the cabinets enjoyed power trips using, in many cases, human rights violating immigration policies against travelers between the islands, and copied every hostile violation from the bigger countries to practice on their own, never the positives, as though they had something to prove.

Many people called for free movement for decades, after all, we are blood cousins across the divide, due to historical displacements, but all appeals were ignored. Then came September, 2025 and the US started bombing the second economy out of the Caribbean Sea. However, most people did not know some had already engaged a third even more lucrative human/baby derived source of high income out of Afrika's population years prior, that has now moved up to second place with the literal ocean obliteration of the former.

The West Indies Federation 1958-1962 - The Sudden Pivot in 2026

Like magic, by October 1, 2025 the borders were immediately opened overnight in some jurisdictions, unfortunately, it was badly rolled out for all the wrong reasons, causing confusion, miscommunication, and lack of critical information. A section of Caricom all agreed on opening land boundaries to most of each other's populations. Belize became one, located on the north-eastern coast of Central America. and a few others along the Caribbean island chain can access whatever is available for those who are interested. The reality is, there is not much left for anyone wanting to emigrate either way, because the islands are so stagnated and pauperized that pickings are meagre.

With economies in severe austerity, as real progress and development were never a priority for so called leaders, always bound by and tied to one colonial country or another, and have to heed instructions as set out, the extent of non-existent independence. Begging, borrowing, aided by dependency tourism is primary: and also due to other external, internal situations, reduced the islands to degradation, but desperate times called for urgent measures. Politicians now had no choice, could no longer pretend they are independent of each other, or are the ones in direct control. Especially with Barbados and its never ending nefarious schemes, and lack of tangible resources.

Belize is multicultural and multilingual, the outlier among the few open borders:

The West Indies Federation 1958-1962 - The Sudden Pivot in 2026

It is becoming increasingly clear that the sudden pivot was rooted in unexpected changes that the taxpayers on islands knew nothing about, as none of the rotating governments ever made a serious attempt to unify before; but because there are relatively new faces with ever more despicable agendas that pointedly exclude majority populations in all conversations, trying to unleash a dictator persona. Therefore, the integration process still has not worked out effectively, is severely hampered and handicapped. The days of Eric Williams have passed into another era, but the calibre of those rushing to take charge leaves a lot to be desired, and is akin to scraping under the barrel, where creepy crawly creatures reside and are found.

This all boils down to motives, distracting populations to conceal the rekindling and continuation of "the greatest crime against humanity," as the previous centuries-old one was defined by the UN in May, 2026; but is a second even more lucrative economy that should see the participants publicly identified, always monitored and never believed because of the emerged dangers represented. A human trafficking that manifested out of nowhere, kept very quiet, and heavily invested using taxpayer's money, and other contacts for the large scale advertising such unlawful logistics demand. With Barbados as the chief architect after running across Afrika. We now wonder when there will be a public apology to Afrikans for the numerous deeply offensive, grave misrepresentations. The most grotesque and highly disturbing part of the recent portrayal, betrayal, the least they can do to start mending fences.

Since they are determined to chase reparations simultaneously, to reshape, re-stage everything into their profoundly distorted image and worldview. While busily multitasking to stubbornly revive a slavery framework with Afrikans at the epicenter, and smiling in everyone's face, but implying otherwise. Although they can see the resistance building, it does not act as a hindrance. For those paying attention, the Caribbean can easily absorb another three million people scattered around without drawing too many questions, and Afrika has the population numbers.

This is causing others to have to work overtime to dismantle a growing slavery network the creators see as wealth generating for themselves, will fight tooth and nail to keep in play; and undeniably convinced they would not have been discovered for decades, if not centuries. Completely filled with such hubris, carelessly ignoring or not even checking they have no cover under diplomatic immunity for such gross cross continent activities, but they and their anxiously waiting partners will not get away this time with even the most minute detail of slavery transactions. Amen Ra

Cleaning Up The Slavery Crime Scenes Trying To Hide The Evidence

When you get caught trafficking pregnant women out of Afrika, and setting up modern day slavery for others, you have to clean up the still ongoing migrant slaves crime scenes from the 1990s, within your borders, backyard real quick, and profess you didn't know anything about it, because everything suddenly hit the news after all that time. Everyone knows about the wannabe slaver minorities with direct links to both governments for decades, given contracts and enabled in their crimes against local Afrikan descendants and young people desperate for jobs.

Especially these two companies that have operated this way for at least 40 years, so throwing them under the bus to appear clean is misleading since this never stopped; and has now extended to migrant workers again, the pattern. We know these are the favored types who would have accompanied the cabinet to Ghana looking for opportunities, they said in their PR campaign to lure Afrikans, that Afrika does not have, according to them, although we are still waiting on Afrika to open four or five embassies in Barbados to take full advantage of all the opportunities that no one else has ever seen:

but here they are trying to hurriedly get rid of the perceived enslavement of the newest victims, the evidence, because that is the only prospects the island seeks, the oppression of others. Everyone should take into consideration, if they mistreated Colombians and Indians in such a deplorable manner, exactly what will they do to Afrikans, particularly those sneaked into the island without work permits and other legal instruments. We remember vividly what happened to the Guyanese under this same administration in the 1990s, early 00s, and Vincentians shortly after, under the other political gang, it etait horrible; the poor souls had to run to the newspapers and begged to be removed from the island before they died in such disgusting conditions. Here they are now occupied trying to put out all the slavery flare ups that are quickly turning into uncontrollable infernos, people should take note.

Cleaning Up The Slavery Crime Scenes Trying To Hide The Evidence

The facebook post below is not about any "birth tourism," there is no such thing on an island that has nothing to offer its people, never did, definitely no available benefits at the scale of North America, from WIC during gestation to other defining alternatives throughout a child's life. What we see is coercing heavily pregnant Afrikan women for the last five years in secret, during the Covid lockdown, to give birth under the island's Slave Codes: using false promises and making those who can afford it pay, a travesty.

Highway robbery, to get free births under fraudulent means, advertising and PR stunts, to have those births registered, and should be made to refund these ladies and their babies. People are upset and speak about how widespread the practice has become over the years, but fear of losing their jobs was used to muzzle everyone. How much lower will they go in believing no one can stop them:

Rampaging Through Afrika, But The Past Is Catching Up Swiftly

This is happening amid several disturbing factors, chief of which is the abuse of all media to blanket populations across both continents in deceptions, leading them down a garden path to oblivion, wilfully creating a distinct disadvantage for those who still believe political hogwash coming from parliaments such as Barbados'. The most recent last resort introduces the re-enslavement of Black African people, simply because the intelligence does not exist among the political class/planners for anything else or better, that is what a lack of ancestral education, after decades of colonial schooling only, produces and causes, no flexibility only tunnel vision.

They see no other way, along with having masters they can no longer hide their presence away from the public, and as servants cannot say no to whoever owns them: because what they do to their employers on the ground, the taxpayers, they can never do to foreign masters, so should not be allowed to get away with any demeaning criminal indiscretions against Caribbean people or Afrikans.

Rampaging Through Afrika, But The Past Is Catching Up Swiftly

There is also the historical, repugnant ancestral covetousness driving such personalities; even with all that was already stolen from the local vulnerable, legally unknowledgeable who lost estates, money, properties, generations worth, with families made homeless in the last fifty to one hundred years, nothing is enough for those who find a method, after every election, to take more each time from the unsuspecting, using laws against the least able to fight back, glorifying in the staged circumstances.

As things stand locally only emasculated minds will comply, and those are shrinking daily, as more people wake up from the blinding haze cast, except for the hardcore terminal mentally enslaved who are beyond salvaging. This must never happen to the newer existing inhabitants where their minds have gotten so feeble through manipulation that politicians have taken up every available space, assumed permanent residence, because they are so easily impressed with silly colonial titles that carry no substance or special energies, and are only there for the optics generated, which has devolved to the negative.

Dunn's River, Jamaica

The inherently avaricious cannot see what belongs to others and leave it alone, so now believe they hit pay dirt and can take full command, get rid of whoever is in their way to start on a rampage of sacking, and will stop at nothing to apply the same workmanship. However, it is entirely up to Afrika and some of its questionable leaders to allow this to happen.

In addition, the bajan parliament gangs would never, ever dare suggest trafficking/enslaving Europeans or North Americans, particularly pregnant women, not even in their wildest dreams: so should not escape the consequences of actually doing the same to pregnant Afrikan women and others, the vicious imposition.

Neither should they keep the newly formed apparatus in place that is currently connecting both continents, allowed to further advance an upgraded version or future plans because they now feel emboldened, this is unacceptable, a provocation.

Rampaging Through Afrika, But The Past Is Catching Up Swiftly

Afrika should have already started the process of systematically disassembling every trafficking structure along the routes Barbados built, without delay, and bill Mia Mottley for all associated costs because of the inconvenience caused, the disruptions, all the bad press with Nigerians now being deported in large numbers from the island, although lured by Barbados' PR system, and still pursue criminal and civil relief/liability from the government. This will effectively send a message to others in the Caribbean who may harbor the same sentiments and ambitions now and in the future, while snugly wrapped up in diplomatic cocoons, many are quite capable.

Those AU members who are weakened, willing and susceptible to the wiles of liars and their machinations will find out eventually, if any got involved. Should they not be willing to protect populations from such perils, Afrikans will have to protect themselves. We know the situation will escalate, and since nothing is hidden anymore, there is some wonder why the island's parasites still bother, knowing everything is currently peeled back to disclose the unfathomable rot of which there is so much, how could they get so overly confident and impudent.

I have written extensively and consistently that Barbados has no authorization on the continent to interfere in anyone's ancestry, in the people's existence, or the natural order of Afrikan births for the last five years, that we only just found out about, it would be tragic if anyone in Afrika gave them a green light to do this, cause such distress. Since their personal habits, policies and choices destroyed the island's population growth. They paid heavily to learn that homosexual and lesbian leanings do not produce births, but now have pregnant Afrikan women paying expensively for both local government's decades of stupidity.

They also had no permission to involve or invite themselves into the reparations conversation either, and are still hanging on to it as though it is a prize that chains them permanently to the AU, with their foot firmly in the door: but continue to do untold, irreparable harm and leave wreckage everywhere they touch down. Therefore cannot speak with any moral authority on anything to do with Afrikan lives, as they are now committing the same offenses.

Rampaging Through Afrika, But The Past Is Catching Up Swiftly

The continent has had further alerts about the fake leader with the out of control, deadly serpentine tongue that wags everywhere, to the public's dismay and annoyance, embellishing far and wide in the excitement built up in the last eight years. Therefore, concerned inhabitants are currently spreading the information all across the continent, cautioning others to be aware of Barbados. So what now, exactly where and how do they think this is going to end in 2026. We are obviously not in the same 1700s-1900s space where these gangs all dwell, seem stuck in a bygone time, and are quite comfortable operating from within those positions, leaving them many years behind to become the timewarp's zoo spectacles, this era's political curiosities on exhibit.

The population have all the right to not sit back and accept mediocrity from administrations only interested in illicitly marinating themselves in other people's birthright business, finances and benefits, none of which are rightfully theirs, and definitely not the reason any of them are elected; nor should anyone cooperate in the railroading of grandchildren and great grands into becoming the future tools and casualties of lazy politicians looking to grab at everything for free because they carry a deluded sense of entitlement, believe they are ever so clever and always armed with a red bag of unending trickery to keep populations trapped indefinitely.

The climate reparations hoax queen refuses to recognize that our most recent ancestors were muzzled by the same political force from which she derives, and we witnessed what was done to them. With fear driven so deep into their very being and psyche, they could not speak, and did not know enough, incapable of articulating or passing on insights to prepare us for circumstances such as these rancid unfolding events arranged by politicians. Those who knew something were too terrified, scared out of their skin; but we do not have the same problem, although not for lack of said culprits trying.

So since we now know that both the Computer Misuse Act devised by the previous tag team administration, recently exposed as unlawful, with the Cyber Crime Bill manufactured by this current parliament posse, and attempted to impose, are both illegal just like them; have no foundation in law, violates whatever is left of the constitution and person's civil and constitutional rights, while breaking every human rights law. Neither parties will ever be able to pull these glaring crimes against the population again in order to permanently silence the country and liberally commit more crimes against everyone, as a career goal. The people have exercised their rights, have spoken and decided, no more. Our Ancients will have the last say. Amen Ra
