Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

Rocking The Mental Enslavement Boat

Malidoma Some in his book "Ritual" states that:

"the elder cannot be an elder if there is no community to make him an elder.

The young boy cannot feel secure if there is no elder whose silent presence gives him hope in life.

The adult cannot be who he is unless there is a strong sense of presence of the other people around.

This interdependency is what I call supportive presence."

Malidoma also states in his book "Ritual" that:

"When there is an opportunity for humans to mourn their losses, the horizon for rites that heal will be pure and bright, and healing will come pouring into the souls in a great moment of reunion."

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated
By Empress Wuraola Oya

A suspicion always lingered that neither Barbados nor any other member state of Caricom who may be involved did not work entirely alone in accusations of transatlantic trafficking. Which thankfully none can refute, and definitely needed help within Afrika, outside of the panderer(s) from the Caribbean already installed in the AU from decades prior. That extra help was vital to organize flights, blanket Nigeria with false advertising, and coordinate due dates for baby's births to correlate with flight arrangements.

While finding enough Nigerian women and men to believe the lie that Barbados has more opportunities and a better passport than every Afrikan country: and also falsely encouraging believers to freely hopscotch from island to island, illegally. The language barrier and logistics alone would be daunting, as the two most important hurdles to overcome. This would take years longer without on the ground aid. The first flights with the Cameroonians targeted were test runs.

Therefore, finding the like minded was crucial to success; it mattered not to them when told they are servants paid by the people, not our masters, and stop plotting against our lives just because they carry colonial titles, which are instant disqualifiers in our realm. This is not why they are elected, and paid salaries as public workers. Little did we know, Afrikans were already in their crosshairs, as primary quarries.

They pointedly ignored any critique and continued unperturbed, determined to show us we could never stop them from reducing black bodies to dollar signs, were equally determined to proceed, no matter what happened, and did not care what we thought. Since they were already five years into the new enterprise which was not yet widely known, people were frightened into secrecy, threatened into silence long before the "baby plot," and other enslaver/trafficking scandals erupted, making them feel safe and secure.

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

Others, beside myself, projected something was deeply wrong. People kept sensing they are a clear and present threat to Afrikan descended people's lives everywhere, and hoped commonsense, which turns out not to be common at all, would prevail. However, multiplying and calculating Afrikan people, and others, if they can get away with that too, in terms of paper money seemed to become its own aphrodisiac for the exceedingly greedy and ruthlessly venal.

There has never been a better time for Afrikan leadership to reach out to ascendants in the diaspora, many of whom possess an excellent, uncanny knowledge base to realign the continent in the ways of the ancients and recreate the balance needed to halt the accelerating rot, but obviously that was unwanted, did not fit the itinerary. Instead those thus attached to the shallow and insipid listened to the frivolous bajan fraudster with the acting skills: to sink the continent further into degradation, and increasingly devalue the lives of Afrikans to expendable commodities. Reviewing the sequence of events, it all now seems like a badly crafted attempt to sabotage a natural order. Whose only success lay in the trafficking scheme, a bonus.

This local actor who gets excited planning and playing vicious political tricks on the people and believes it is in possession of irresistible charms, cuteness and high intellect, when interacting with the weakest minds; did not have to do much to convince those accused of selling humans longer than should still be occurring in Afrika. While both sides seem incapable of doing anything other than what has brought modern infamy for all the wrong reasons.

This has prompted the belief, from myself as well, black enslavers should be exposed in every corner of the earth, and prevented from hiding behind various masters, cloaking themselves to avoid criminal charges and scandals. This has gone on for longer than necessary and is not getting any better, not when politicians have taken to using disguises, and their masters' silhouette to slave trade across nations. All the while pretending black consciousness, effectively fooling the masses, the prime evil is real.

Know Your History It Erases The Mystery - Professor James Smalls

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

Once they know they will not be drawing up new schematics of horror and terror for my grands and great grands' lifetime. This is a whole different epoque, not as before when the creativity of savage beasts caused untold pain and suffering to Afrikan minds and bodies, because our ancestors did not know what to expect, were not prepared, had to sit, stand and take it, helpless. Videos are now circulating about the pure terror unleashed on their lives in the west for centuries. Those monstrous plans will be preempted in even more creative ways than anyone knows exists in this new beginning. I can assure the political black faces, who will not stop, unless stopped they will be met with Spiritual forces if they think their bravery exceeds our strength. Amen Ra

Whereas previously colonial titled Caricom members were largely unknown, only given exposure when navigating through certain circles, as allowed by masters. Then very suddenly desperately yearned to become world famous, part of the strategy. The bajan fame seeker saved everyone the effort and money of a full blown exposure campaign, leapt to the front, and spent millions in PR stunts to make itself globally renowned, and in so doing also self-identified to the world, including bringing focus on its closest regional allies, so none can hide their slave master persona anymore, everyone now know their faces: but how about the comrades, counterparts on the Afrikan continent, or from which other holes they conceal themselves. They remain in the shadows so far, for now.

I still get upset every time this comes up during reading, how dare Afrikan presidents in collusion with the Caribbean parliament dwellers are gungho to get reparations none deserve to be involved in, on our behalf, even if symbolic. When people who know better do not want them anywhere near this hot potato. Especially since we are only seen as "economic losses," how dare they and their fellow vote beggars have the audacity.

None of whom existed as politicians in those times of trials and chattel slavery, definiitely not the traitor class. Since their ancestors, whether betrayers or victims, were also enslaved. I have published about this before, and it did not give them pause, they were not even once fazed. The tragedy in this is, they do not see us as "their people," but are ready to collect from our lives, and that of those Afrikans they view as purgeable, and deserving of further enslavement by transport to the west in this era.

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

These are the same politicians who still allow major human rights violations against Black people today, including racism, exploitation, thefts of land, estates, resources, the future and every other human reducing crimes. They say nothing, do nothing, depending on who is paying them in large amounts, and are extremely proud of their achievement; but yet hold themselves in such high esteem, believing someone owes them, they must be the only ones to collect, and somehow convinced each other, that is leverage. Europe and the UK has allowed this to go on for too long, and should not enable their offensive, annoying political employees to get more carried away with their money hungry, grabbing fantasies and delusional side jobs:

"There were various international pleas between the early 1990s and the mid-2000s. Ludicrously, African countries claimed they deserved reparations for economic losses during the Trans-Atlantic Slave trade. These deplorable African speakers cited the "kidnap" and enslavement of "their people." The fact is, slavery has been a cultural tradition for thousands of years, long before Europeans reached the continent. None of these petitions include reparations for the descents of the actual victims of slavery. Without the willing participation of Africans in the centuries-long Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade, the Europeans would never have gained global dominance. Slavery enriched the Western hemisphere, the final piece in the system of white supremacy."

"None of these petitions include reparations for the descents of the actual victims of slavery."

We do not have to ask why, or if that is still the case, since it is Afrika started these petitions in the 1990s, still have the leading role, and recently merged with the new tag-alongs Caricom on the scheme.

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

To reiterate the above, we are well aware it is the only reason why reparations hunters want the money going to them and not to the descendants of the "actual victims of slavery." We are sure that is all they think and dream about, otherwise why else would they be involved at all. So typically they believe it is their turn to get rich from the enslavement of Afrikans: and somehow also think the west owes them money directly in their hands for their traitor ancestors helping with the enrichment of the west.

So what would they need reparations for since slavery is so much more lucrative, builds empires. They wasted no time, already started that ball rolling across the atlantic, and are well on their way. The question would be, why are they involved when no one can remotely trust them. While I will never point fingers directly at Afrikan leaders without deferring to those with more experience, better networks and channels to access accurate information; it came as absolutely no surprise the following comment was made, it was just a matter of time:

"Pachamama

Astute observers of Afrikan affairs would have long noticed that the elites in the Caribbean have found an unjust cause with their fellow travellers on the continent. As a result, in this class collaborationist project the sellouts in the Caribbean only talk to the sellouts in Afrika. We would have never seen anybody from the Caribbean meeting with the genuine forces in opposition to neoliberalism, colonialism, racism and imperialism in Afrika. Mottley can best wax lyrically, but at the end of the day she'll still sing for her supper from her European friends like von de Leyen and other Western fascists.

The African Unión is in all ways similar to Caricom, as Caricom is to Ecowas, and on and on, as up to 70 percent of its operating costs are paid by the EU. Who calls the tune? Anybody from the Caribbean who has not met with the governments of Botswana, Namibia, Mali, Níger, Burkino Faso, Madagascar and a few others are clearly saying to us that only the Western approved salón niggers from the Caribbean are to talk to their opposite numbers of lackeys in Afrika."

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

Therefore, we do not know who they think they are fooling, besides dumb little followers. Taxpayers must expect better people, but the morally and ethically decadent seem to find new lows that others will never stoop to retrieve. We know what we have in the Caribbean, some repulsively worse than others and will never seek to change that trajectory unless kicked out of parliaments, and reduced to begging to return after being denied by the electorate. When having no more of the protections they enjoy from their masters to commit atrocities against populations, that easily allowed them to come up with plots to damage Afrikan lives.

Which they never tell the people of such intent prior to entering parliaments: hence the all out desperation to rig elections to stay in the game for the last eight years, acted as a driver for this wickedness. However, we definitely do not want to hear the taint from Caricom meeting with governments of a much better stature: those fighting a battle to maintain sovereignty in Afrika, and soundly grounded. They will only poison the atmosphere with their presence and leave a lingering stench of political blight, accompanied by the curse of the enslaver. So it is best they stay within the company of their peers and continue contaminating each other. That way everyone else remains safer.

This is the reason nothing surprises us anymore. We always knew the real story about any questionable Afrikan leader's direct involvement, at whatever level, would surface given time. Which never made it to our ears during the height of this calamity; but looking at the state of some countries, they are quite identifiable. To actually join with the most deceitful person out of the Caribbean one could only hope to never meet: against your own people, says a lot about characters or the lack thereof, and also showcases the disdain to populations when allowing the trafficking of your people to destinations that are historical slave ports.

We can now pin down why journalists in the west were repeatedly brutally attacked by the bajan actor. Many of those confrontations went overboard and seemed like an attempt to cover up misdeeds yet unknown. The bajan was definitely protesting too much and picking fights with journalists to claim a victim role, that never rang true, pure malicious deflecting, now we know why.

Afrikan (AU) Leadership Miscalculated

Cabinets also excel at using their masters as convenient cover to avoid detection, a very useful tool, just as they are doing now in the reparations scam, while committing crimes against humanity. That is all we heard when growing up, "it is the UK doing it," they said when confronted about why our lives seem like slavery never ended, and we are not moving forward with the passing decades. Yet they volunteered faithfully and repeatedly to carry out anti-human deeds, still do, and choreograph grand political shows right up until they slither into parliaments to get paid by their future victims, the population, as well as their masters.

The real reason they never want to leave is the free money derived from playing all sides. We only found out in the last few years about a top global hierarchy, who are their immediate bosses, most people had no clue. The politicians/employees cannot now say they do not know them, but will have us believe they are their enemies: and continue to insult our intelligence where those global relationships are concerned.

Rocking The Mental Enslavement Boat

We witnessed throughout our adult life the captured and mentally enslaved celebrate an emancipation under the tutelage of local political slavers, not unlike the religious church slavers and their recent artifice with the duplicitous reggae interest, who have no idea what any of it entails. However, they do know those they keep under domination with talk only, will never achieve freedom unless they extricate themselves from mental bondage. The charade was safe for extended lengths of lifetimes, once there is no real education available to rock that boat, and are now using anything handy to make sure it never happens, including what they hated before. Basically, mental slavery is self-inflicted in this region, since the instruction to reverse the plight is now available but not widely utilized or popular enough yet.

People will have to aggressively seek what they need in the way of literary material. No one can help those who do not want to help themselves and are most comfortable rolling in the mud prepared and packaged by parliaments. The concerns are mainly for incoming births, children who are already here, and young teens, pre adults who do not know what is happening, because their parents and grandparents are not tutored sufficiently about any facts. We have been in that situation and it is never smooth sailing, and quite sure at our age, it is even worse for those who came after.

Rocking The Mental Enslavement Boat

One would think with all the previous squandered years to distribute Afrikan ancestral knowledge and its origins, that would have been number one on the agenda. Particularly in the last thirty years, and moreso with the time misspent gallivanting all over Afrika while eerily obsessed with stalking Afrikan slaves, to steal their lives, labor and families'. Doing so would have better equipped the people in this region making it an easier, decidedly much better and smoother transition. Since they took the pretend emancipation route for such a lengthy pantomime.

Reparations in the hands of politicians will never do that, not with recently available information seen as the catalyst to completely muddy the waters and prevent certain processes from taking place. They will not be allowed to gain any more leeway in that sabotage. Those opportunities are gone forever, they were/are not the right people to do it either, never were in their compromised state of flux.

All scholarly intellectuals from the last hundred years, literally thousands of them, have already agreed on a credible way forward. Using information left by the ancestors specifically for that purpose. Money hunters have no say in how any of it should or will play out. Again, they are elected to competently manage islands and countries in the present, not to control our future or that of each generation, or guide/orchestrate it into annihilation.

Whatever personal agreements made with their masters, and contracts signed, have nothing to do with what was already ordained to happen. This fixation by the colonial-owned to squeeze themselves into Spiritual spaces where they do not belong, are not welcomed as trespassers because of the negative, disrupting dangers they pose, will end.
