Colonial Titles Are Unable To Break Their Weak Signals
By Empress Wuraola Oya

We already know when not too well informed themselves, the money-hungry locally titled will never prepare the people on the island or incoming Afrikans for the culture shock that is sure to result; neither knows about, nor how to navigate for when conditions arise. A consequence none are equipped to handle. The interest lay only in putting on a circus performance to appear successful in the short term. Which is not going too well either, as people have come to expect such irrational antics, while seeing them and the designed distractions coming from miles away, and should prepare.

Then when Karma catches up, as she surely will, blame it all on someone or something else, everything except the talking head's ill-preparation. The inadequacies can hardly be hidden and are sure to manifest, there are already signs bubbling just under the surface. The low vibrational signal passed between political titles and supporters reinforces this problem, but they themselves provided the link to this permanent debility. The only strengths lay in spreading the accompanying weaknesses and convincing the gullible to bear the fallout. Which is no challenge, resulting in acceptable failures and chaos we are forced to witness.

Public servants on both continents are yet to learn that carrying mentalities similar in content produces identical results. Whereas Afrika is yet to move forward from the multiple millennia to centuries-old worth of dormancy, it is also reflected in this region, and can be termed self-inflicted, when no diverse intelligence is applied. With both handicapped and hampered by solution deficits, as the products and creations of the system within which they operate.

So far there have only mostly been mini-me wannabe copycat mischief that go around in a circular motion with no breaks, no new introductions. Everything presented is devoid of ancestral inventions, and excessively limited in scope. When self-contained on the exact same wavelengths, and drawing down on mirror image brainwaves, at the lowest possible frequency. Amun Ra

The same way we correctly attribute "you are what you eat," to food intake, you are what you learn is equally applicable to the colonial schooling that has dominated, but never seen as a learning experience. Which many Elders continue to vocalize with alerts, we should pay attention and apply intelligence to navigate the terrain. When compared to, and combined with ancestral education can identify deficiencies that exist within structures, unseen by those who blindly immersed themselves, and once addressed are correctable. Firstly, ancestral education must be reintroduced, there is no moving forward without its guidance, minus catastrophe.

However, it is clear within the last 100 years, very few who have access and available platforms attempted to readjust or transform. The ones who made suggestions were diminished, their writings and pronouncements ignored to the continent's detriment. Stolen and rewritten original scripts from within the last six thousand years still cannot replace what our ancestors left us to utilize, and are worthless. They contain the same plagiarized rubbish, and have become too antiquated to function even within the contrived system.

The alignments are now completely different, therefore acquiring and engaging a new mindset directly in sync with ancient worlds, is crucial. No one can make it up as they go along or fake it to make it anymore, in this new Genesis. We are now quite sure that the persistence in listening to political noises with no substance or valuable information to reach energies that fortify, has become redundant and headed to another cul-de-sac where all others ended. There is certainly not another hundred years left to squander more lives.

Wrong Attitude From Afrikan Nurse Practitioner In US Made Her Famous

Personally, I am of the view this is one of the feathers that broke the camel's back, it is only so much antagonistic behavior one can take before saying, no more. Not only was the (former?) nurse, unprofessional, extremely rude and disrespectful, but had the audacity to decide who should go back into slavery, when she herself is an immigrant and easily removed. While completely forgetting that a form of enslavement of Afrikans started in Afrika by Afrikans. Who then became enslaved by other groups first. New groups who watched and learned the dehumanizing crime from them on the continent, before it expanded globally.

Those who were observing, like the Arab world had nothing going for it at the time, took the enslavement of Afrikans to a more devastatingly brutal, extinct level, that is their inventive apparatus and signature contribution of total destruction for Afrika's people, where they are still to recover. Other groups later adopted and redeveloped the criminal slavery, engineered their own versions individually. However, Afrikans will have to own the slavery story as the originators, and cease trying to pass their invention on to others to absolve themselves from blame. Start taking responsibility and then work toward completely abolishing and destroying the enslavement system in Afrika permanently so its evil, ancient usage ends.

This is the right era to create laws and actively imprison those who still enrich themselves from the repulsive practice, that also allows them to still steal resources and destabilize countries: either that or quit complaining about the west and seeking reparations: you cannot have it both ways. Where you have no leg to stand on in international courts when others can accuse you of the same crimes, along with conspiracy to commit, and attach some Afrikan presidents as defendants. With available evidence, as still colluding with the Arab world, and others, to continue the perpetration of the "greatest crime in history against humanity," Afrikans. No one else can, should or will remove the stigma of slavery, Afrika is the only one who could.

Hopefully, the UN vote is not treated as just another catch phrase and the obligations it comes with are dismissed in favor of large-scale recommencement and further continuation of the same human rights injustices. I am yet to see any such work started after the glow of announcing the UN's Declaration. One would think legislatures would have immediately gotten busy, cranked up and made global headlines that all 54 countries have finally immediately abolished, without delay, and criminalized slavery at the national level as a collective. With the instruments now firmly in place to swiftly arrest old and new slaver perpetrators.

What does the AU think will happen if they do not shut down the continent's enslavement networks? Just asking. Yet five months later, nothing. Although now in possession of all the needed tools to proceed. Instead we saw the bajan title take it upon itself to immediately start trafficking Afrikans across the Atlantic like she was handed a brand new license. Then a clown show for reparations in front of cameras followed in Ghana, with the most vicious wannabe slave master from this region in attendance, none of it inspiring.

Educational sequences before, after and during slavery should be part of the syllabus so our ancient story is better understood, and should never leave classrooms in any millennia. As things stand, populations really do not know enough. Since not knowing the entire story and loose lips put the unknowledgeable in unenviable, awkward situations. When uneducated about how to perceive or analyze the American experience. Making the person in question totally unprepared for the massive backlash, when they stepped out of line, and the subsequent investigation from the nurse's association that ensued in this case, triggered by numerous, then blanket reporting of the incident filled with outrage.

In watching the video again two years later, it becomes uglier and more vulgar. Black Americans should never be subjected to this hatred from Afrikans. Some of whom mysteriously believe they are better, buying into the ridiculous class ignorance that put her in that position to begin with, and tend to infect Black people. No one was pleased, and actually happy she was taken down a notch by her own actions, which were unacceptable.

Lack of knowledge is a terrible thing, Ms. Diallo has no clue the dynamics between Black Americans and the system, but already decided she is an expert and can reduce people of her ancestral persuasion to her rank. Therefore, the young lady can hardly play the victim card when immediately, within seconds, was taken down by her own hands and mouth.

So if you are going to take your beastly practices to larger countries, and too many Afrikans tend to do so, as seen across the web, expect a response in kind. This one was a terrible blot on Nigeria's reputation, thankfully the accused served federal prison time for enslaving her endangered, fellow Nigerians in the US.

There are so many more such recent stories, some too repulsive to repost. Therefore, it is no surprise Africans outlived their welcome in the US, those who go to such extremes. AU presidents have to know about these problems. One would think they ran programs to educate those seeking to emigrate, to leave all bad habits at home where they belong.

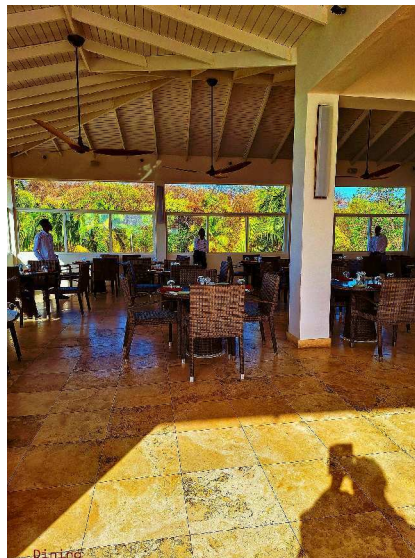

Wrong Attitude From Afrikan Nurse Practitioner In US Made Her Famous

Given the circumstances of not enough done to keep Afrikans on the continent by way of inter-country trades, of which there exists too many avenues to count, and never put to use: but have no problem hearing people call one another foreigners, attack and destroy each other.

Including young women seeking employment which if presidents start doing their jobs can be found in Afrika, but yet these vulnerable, totally defenseless females are sent to Arab countries who still use a system of enslavement to rape, murder, beat, torture and damage these ladies. Then nothing is done about it by AU presidents. Maybe it is time to take a closer look at yourselves when minimizing the Afrikan woman's life to nothing and is not moved, have absolutely no feelings of the plight you created and energy given to the Kafala death system in place for Afrikans.

From our perspective, the blame solely belongs to presidents who appear numb about how to proceed, and what to do to jumpstart and escalate progressiveness. The west, though guilty of plenty, cannot be blamed for everything; therefore Afrikan presidents should do more as paid by populations. We are well aware how things work, and know when procrastination and inertness are at play within governments. We see it daily and have from children: where politicians believe they have all the time in the world to do the least, many times only the basics, only to please to satisfy foreign interests. However, they do nothing else to uplift and advance populations besides waiting for the next election to win, the only reason they need the people. and believe that is the extent of their job descriptions.

Then everything festers for decades on end until it is time for them to leave, with total socio-fiscal destruction left in their wake as a grotesque legacy. Therefore relying substantially on emigrant transfers to the west, now at an end, all of which is unnecessary given the continent's landmass, and unlimited resource reserves. If not halted it will carry into another century with the same lamentations. While those not adequately informed will still see it as glorious accomplishments, and make utter fools of themselves. Once this is established in the minds of Afrikans, there should be no repeat of these horrifying incidents as outlined in the video, or in any other country, especially in the Caribbean, where a completely different energy resides.

Reparation Hunters

What the reparation hunters are not saying in their hot and sweaty frenzy, presuming they know. We already established that Afrika has at least two billion Afrikan inhabitants, therefore, that project is massive, and will need unequivocally thousands of skillful lawyers just to sift through information before any proceedings. The invasion, occupation and enslavement of Afrikans did not start in the 13-14th century, that was only a continuation of Afrika's numerous millennia-old story. Our western journey and story has very little to do with what happened before in terms of the overall picture, and was a kidnapping plain and simple for many different reasons at the village chief and kingdom level, and as such, that is how it should be treated.

Therefore, extensive research will have to start from six thousand years ago, until present on the continent to cover the fullness of what these crimes against Afrikans entailed, how they started, evolved and extended, just to calculate payments and get ready for civil suit, if only to demonstrate context. The Brattle report addressed this for Afrika, but I am sure only covered just so far, the reason the calculation arrived at 16 trillion, but that was just an estimation. Then we noticed there was no attempt to include the Arab slave trade in humans that went on for what seemed like eternity for victims. With the fallout still ongoing; and should be appended, as it proceeded for well over 1300 years, with raids and kidnappings conducted from as early as 640, some people put it at 2500 years of occupation, after some more investigating.

The bajan title got very selective like it was her decision only to make, giving the Arab slave trade a pass like she is the proprietor. Later we heard they settled for a business arrangement, another loan for the island, an additional unwanted debt, awards and money on the side for themselves which opens the door to receiving ongoing commissions. Money they used to project and pretend philanthropy in another act. Anymore received goes directly to them; as expected from the self-possessed arrogant, who has no permission.

A very strange and dangerous obsession, attraction has developed and tied to payments already received. So the people were sold out once again for modern day pittance, and to initiate another personal money train, but this is easily made null and void using the same arguments, no approval received from Afrikan ascendants to represent our interests on ancestral lands. The question remains, who does this title think it is?

Reparation Hunters

This happened because shallow minds are impressed and enthralled with hot air ejected from lying mouths, the fraudulent celebrity show, and because they were not paying attention. That is the reason I have publicly and adamantly stated for over five years, that two-bit, hand to mouth traitors cannot and will have no authorization to represent me in ancestral claims in the west nor on the continent: and made it very clear when the direction they were taking came to light.

I always had a problem with university talking spouts, and their political partners/bosses in this region only circling the 14-18th centuries without at least giving up the full story. With nothing ever entered the schools, therefore in 2026 the people still know very little to nothing. Particularly when I found it myself, which allows for descents to make accurate determinations, since the bajan titles are so untrustworthy. Only to my utter surprise later to watch them and Afrikan presidents merge both in their silliness, and looking increasingly like a failed preemption. With the titles from this region only looking for money to line their pockets, a temporary solution. They never opt for permanency, there is not enough quick money in that scenario to fund lifestyles.

Another stumbling block will be the time it takes to compile all this data, similar to the reparations court the bajan title was begging the world to build, fund and then train them how to use. Which would have taken up to 50-75 years or more, just to get it right, inclusive of expenditures, given current conditions. Somehow they always believe their half way scams are works of pure genius. I have not heard about that brain flatulence recently once exposed as utter nonsense a few years ago.

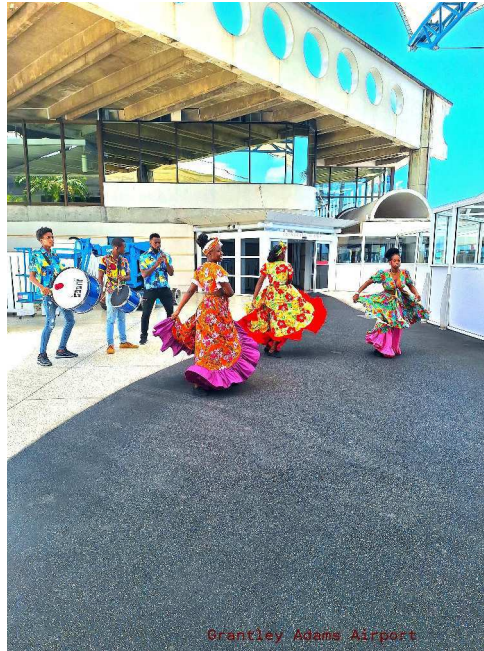

However, this would take decidedly longer, none of us will be around and it will still not be a quarter of the way to completion. So whereas, from the 14th century is already well documented, an easier legal process, and can easily take an inordinate lengthy period also, given how these processes prolong on and on through civil courts; as well as the current population size which has grown exponentially since the 12-20 million ancestors were initially kidnapped, and will grow even more as time passes, adding to the list of plaintiffs.

Reparation Hunters

Again, by the time all of this is over, the connivers will not be here either, let us hope they are not thinking they will, and still putting on this questionable parade to haunt our descendants with the sheer stupidity of The Reparations Show. Therefore, just imagine what it would take to process an entire multi-generationally affected population of two billion people, enslaved for thousands of years, and growing by leaps and bounds in population volume. The colonial titles never think things through, beyond their depthless dreams and fantasies. I do not know why people still listen to the usual suspects known for misleading entire populations with delusions of grandeur.

In this region's case, it is easier, less expensive and time consuming for those agreeing to pay reparations, to do so directly to descents, as I said from the beginning: therefore thefts will not be an added problem. Thereby, bypassing the money grabbers whom no one needs as the middleman/woman. All the information is available about which ships left where, everything is well documented, impeccable records were kept. Including who is carrying which names, where they originated and genetic testing takes care of all the rest to connect lineage to varying continents.

I did not need the bajan titles to find out what my ancestry held, as a matter of fact they overreached for decades, and ran themselves ragged trying to keep it hidden, as their secret, imagine that. Therefore, no one else should accept them in anything to do with ancestry, they need to go find honest jobs and leave us alone.

Trying to figure exactly where politicians are going with their dime store scam is mystifying, they really need to give it a rest, and get a life. If they are not going to eradicate and remove slavery and slave laws/codes from the statute books of legislatures forthwith. Then criminalize racism, oppression and exploitation. What use are they in only seeking money that does not belong to them. They are more useful efficiently performing the managerial jobs for which they are handsomely paid, neglect and only show incompetence for the people's money. Therefore, they will get no facilitation, only brutal exposure. Amen Ra
