Assassinating, Selling Whole Tribes, Kingdoms, And Brutally Taking Their Place
For Thousands of Years
By Empress Wuraola Oya

Betrayals between tribes actually predates, precedes occupier and invader's presence on the Afrikan continent. There was and still is always this need to steal, sabotage each other's contributions, progress and development, entire lives, inaugural kingdoms, the appropriation of lineal heritage even between relatives, by jumping succession lines, through tribal wars and any other excuse to dominate. We are left to wonder exactly how many of the present day tribes are the original from one hundred thousand years ago or longer.

Particularly those who never carried distinctive features, attributes and other identifiable characteristics unlike some who did, and whose lineage are so well defined, they cannot hide even today. We know after the 12th century, no one can be taken at face value, nothing was ever the same since. Because by then many genuine leadership bloodlines had been replaced, displaced and or made extinct. Completely erased pre and post, by slave masters, and those who sold out. The reason we are seeing the resultant shambles today.

That process started multi-millennia before Europeans or any other activity that caused further massive and severe damage. With everyone now so blended in, it is difficult to differentiate among other tribes to find out who is really who, without genetic testing, but we see plainly the wreckage caused by them as well, over such a lengthy epoch. So for Ghana to continue treating us as if we do not know what really happened; confirming they are delinked from ancestors, is now the source and cause of major, self-made embarrassment:

Ghanaian Goes To Howard University To Preach About Afrikan Unity To FBAs

Just for the record, because it has lately become a source of public debate regarding FBAs and others. I am in no way interested in what people choose to call themselves, once they feel comfortable with self-named labels, that is a very personal choice. My only concerns lay in those who try to impose their ideologies, philosophies on other people, or whatever else others poured into their heads, or give people names and despicable descriptions they do not like, or did not give any permission.

With that said, I mentioned more than once, Ghana, the Ashanti, is the wrong group to speak of or on reparations, maybe very few in that new area of Ghana can do so honestly. I cannot say the same for Afrika as a whole, that is for Afrikans to decide, but for us, they have no place, no rights and need to cease, desist, and unconditionally stop wilfully provoking the situation in this region to cause an escalation. Especially when Barbados so aggressively entered the picture, and we knew right away we were in extreme danger. I protested immediately: since local betrayers do not change their spots overnight, and are merely impersonators, no one of consequence.

Preaching to Black Americans about unity is really rich coming from leaders who can never unite on anything and have drained any such positive energy from their populations: one need look no further than current news feed to see the hypocrisy. Our ancients knew what we would have to confront, and saw them all coming, and so did Kofi Annan, former Secretary General of the United Nations. That King did warn us, anuk dwa, we are eternally grateful. Little do any of them know they were always monitored for this current divulgence and had to show their true colors to the world eventually.

Maybe it is time they start looking beyond the slaver, slave narrative, the lowest of frequencies, and climb the rungs of ancestral intellectual prominence that is available, a refreshing change, a step in the right direction. Our younger generations should not have to carry this weight, although they seem quite capable of beating back this inferior beast, and energy sucking spirit knocking at the gates, trying to gain entry.

The older folk on the continent running what is now widely described as a "grift," are making themselves look ridiculous, a less than stellar performance definitely not up to par, or any other worthwhile standard. The area of Elmira castle, built by the Dutch and changed hands several times amongst colonizers, was never part of the ancient empires, the real kingdoms existed within the Sahel. The new Ghana region was clearly created specifically for the enslavement enterprise and chosen because of location, logistics; and where many chiefs and their families lived, worked as enforcers, and administrators for colonizers during kidnappings and sale of our ancestors.

The lies have finally lost their power when all spells from those regions all the way back to the west were cracked and broken to pieces, and are no longer effective. With a little bit of research all is revealed, despite the diversion and attempt at sleight of hand. This is now in the open, so it has become useless to continue the charade, believing we will fall for the barrage of lies waiting to be unleashed, they may as well keep them.

Assassinating, Selling Whole Tribes, Kingdoms, And Brutally Taking Their Place For Thousands of Years

The primordial kingdoms and queendoms were scattered all across the Sahel. Some of us still carry those lineages stretching between five to seven such nations, combined with many others from nearly half of the continent's area and square miles. Therefore, we knew from day one, what was presented was not the whole story, never rang true because it was nowhere near the truth. What is crystallized, most of the inhabitants on the continent have lost track of their story, were denied ancestral education, and will have to catch up, if they so desire.

While it looks more and more like their leaders have no such interest and are disturbingly obsessed with the ways of the west, as generational employees seemingly terrified of losing jobs, positions in the lower pecking order. We therefore get to watch how things progress with no interference. People have to know when they are cloistered in an unenviable space, if they ever recognize this, should then strive to get out on their own. None of which is our concern when one makes their bed and must now lay in it by themselves. Meaning neither Ghana, Nigeria nor any other proud slaver countries will ever have our support to continue committing crimes against us and our incoming generations, we will never endorse them. So what now, what next?

As far as we can see, whoever owes these countries reparations, it is not us, and that is strictly between them, and with whom they should converse directly, publicly or privately: no one really cares, but leave us out of any such dialogue. Since we are not interested in generational employer, employee relations to that extent. The Caribbean people of Afrikan descent should not be dragged into any of that as a prop, just because small time slavers sold their people for very little to nothing for centuries, and now their descents want more money they believe is due to them. Which none deserve or should get, but believe we are the key to help them.

We are not Afrika's or Caribbean politician's leverage against the UK, Europe or the US. Listening to Black Americans, they feel the same way. We see this gig that Ghana and other anti-Black countries on the continent put together in the last 30 years going nowhere, as it was handled very badly from the very beginning. With greedy bajan bottomfeeders, descendants of small time slavers themselves tagging along for the ride, hoping to gain. They certainly will not get us participating in something so poorly planned, disorganized, mismanaged, and has become a global shame as what they did keeps being shared all around.

Assassinating, Selling Whole Tribes, Kingdoms, And Brutally Taking Their Place For Thousands of Years

Facts are extremely stubborn and always refuse to go away:

"There were various international pleas between the early 1990s and the mid-2000s. Ludicrously, African countries claimed they deserved reparation for economic losses during the Trans-Atlantic Slave trade. These deplorable African speakers cited the "kidnap" and enslavement of "their people." The fact is, slavery has been a cultural tradition for thousands of years, long before Europeans reached the continent."

I personally take great offense at being called an "economic loss," for Afrika, what is wrong with yall heads, are you mad? This means reparation hunters still have the slaver mentality in seeing us only as commodities.

Waging war on each other is self-defeatist, as our story has shown, it has gotten the continent nothing but grief, heavy losses, and absolutely nowhere, never will. Meaning due to the path chosen, chances of attaining the highest achievements are next to nil. We hope that is not the intent for us, because warrior bloodlines did survive, come with ancestral preparation, are well armed Spiritually: and we certainly hope it is seen, we are not the least bit impressed with the current state of affairs offered by the AU as a leading collective, and local governments individually.

Those are the people you want working with you and not driven to do so against, since, not knowing much about us in either locale; and can go by nothing said by politicians who only know about their foolish followers, yardfowls, admirers who are no threat to anyone but themselves. The true definition of shooting oneself in the foot is on full exhibition, when the blind leads the blind.

The American diaspora rightly turned its back in self-preservation and total disgust and they did not mince any words: because of the wretchedness displayed by money hounds trying to feed off our ancestor's beaten, branded and tortured bones. The chances of success sunk to zero in seconds, you will get no aid without a higher vibration introduced. Information has long been dispersed about what is really done to Black Americans in Afrika, many years before the above video circulated. Of course this is causing all types of consternation, with righteous anger rapidly rising. The eight to twenty-one to thirty years between the continents wasted scheming and conniving against us would have truly been better spent finding out what was needed to proceed. The long term colossal plotting and planning ended up going nowhere.

Assassinating, Selling Whole Tribes, Kingdoms, And Brutally Taking Their Place For Thousands of Years

When we see the nerve that exists to act like there is some entitlement to speak about Black Americans existence in the US where you do not know the facts of what happened over a 245 year period, did not reach out, or stay in touch, and never cared. How could anyone welcome that awful lack of respect and bad manners.

Then to go even further and take liberties to speak on Caribbean reparations without our invitation, misled by the thespian soaked pantomimist in the bajan and other parliaments. In plain and simple words, we do not know why Afrika is meddling in everyone else's reparations except its own, especially when UK and Europe have well documented records of Afrikan ancestor's deep involvement in enslavement crimes against Black humanity as the purveyors of the entire template, and can release them at any time. Ghana and all the other countries plotting against us in this tragedy are not operating on sound logic.

How could anyone be that distracted, determined and tone deaf, refuse to hear they are seen as a threat to us in this region. The best way would be to remedy the situation. Once we saw how easily they accepted the most treacherous of politicians, that was one of the first signs. It was not hard after that to realize they all "sang from the same hymn sheet."

We already witnessed the absolute mess Barbados made with Ghana in the latest flimflam. Both are on everyone's lips, and waiting to see what other ruination they have in store for themselves. Coupled with the distraction now revealing itself in amazing ways, like modern day slavery out of Nigeria, transported to the Caribbean. While pretending they are not the orchestrators. Yet no one wants to save themselves from further humiliation and cannot see what will happen when everyone closes ranks, an inevitability. What a waste of eight to thirty years that should have been used building and cementing relationships with Black cousins in the west, instead of driving wedges between them, only to publicly self-destruct.
