

african online
publishing

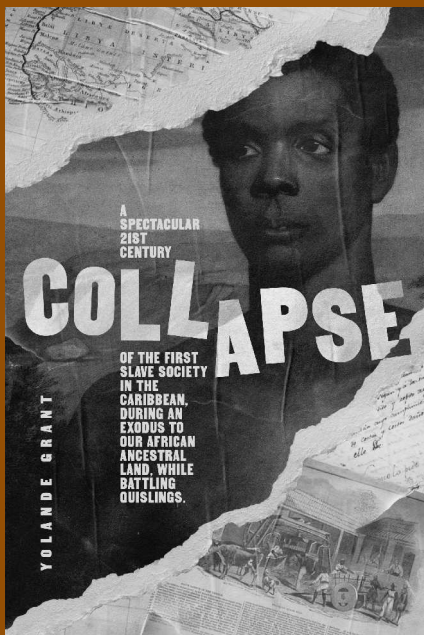

Kush Quarterly Magazine.

Issue /63 January - June 2048

Malkia Wa Walfalme

Queen of the Monarchs Empress Wuraola Oya
Embracing the Entire Global Space

Read our book Pages 24-27 in Kush Quarterly Magazine

and on:

african-online-
publishing.webflow.io

Table of Contents

Page 2.....Editorial

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

FOR THE SPIRIT OF KWANZAA

For the Motherland, cradle of civilization. For the ancestors and their Spiritual guidance.

For the elders, from whom We can learn much.

For our youth, who represent The promise of tomorrow.

For the unborn, who hold the keys to immortality.

For our Kemetyu, The original Black people. May you return to your right minds, because you are the Seeds of humanity.

Excerpt taken from Spiritual Warriors are Healers by: Mfundishi Jhutyms Ka N Heru Hassan K Salim

Ma'at
Divine Order,
Balance
Editorial

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

By Empress Wuraola Oya

When I thought things could get no uglier, or Caricom politicians able to stoop no lower, they managed to prove me wrong again. I have personally fought against hateful racism for the last 15 years, when finding out what it really connotes. After realizing its annihilating effects on Black populations; and knew without a doubt it is the vehicle used to collect incredibly large amounts of bribes for the last 60 plus years as politicians took root in local cabinets. After realizing just how much leeway they had been given by foreign masters, in which to maneuver undetected, and also well shielded to function within exclusive parameters.

While victims of long term grievances remained helpless to fight off the blistering stink that saturates everywhere, and everyone the practice touched. This Guardian article published two weeks ago, should have been required reading, shared and reposted across Caricom; particularly, and including in the schools to inform entire populations about the progress made in warding off local political schemes to maliciously hide information from the public. With the view to solidify lack of knowledge that can otherwise, when inactive, save lives, and eradicate generational poverty. Unless stopped completely, treacherously menacing, self-serving politicians will never end the sabotaging of Black people's future, to stage and deploy narrow agendas. This is the second instance within a month crucial material is kept from local media publication.

Source: theguardian.com

August 31, 2026

Excerpts:

<https://www.theguardian.com/world/2026/aug/31/countries-legally-obliged-consider-slavery-reparations-un-committee>

"A UN committee has said countries are legally obliged to consider reparations for the transatlantic slave trade and take other measures to address the enduring legacy of racial discrimination.

Guidance published on Monday by the committee on the elimination of racial discrimination (CERD) said the obligations arose from a legally binding 1965 convention on racial discrimination, not from the legal standards that existed when the slave trade took place."

Editorial

By Empress Wuraola Oya

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

"States parties must implement comprehensive reparatory measures for people of African descent, covering all aspects of remedies," said the UN document, which may be cited in courtrooms."

"But the UN document argues that, regardless of whether slavery and the slave trade were illegal under laws of the day, countries remain responsible under current international obligations to tackle their continuing effects."

Source: digitallibrary.un.org

Notes

Adopted on the 1406th plenary meeting, 21 Dec. 1965.

"Annex: International Convention on the Elimination of All Forms of Racial Discrimination."

In: Resolutions adopted by the General Assembly during its 20th session. 21 September-22 December 1965, - A/6014. - 1966. - p. 47-52. - (GAOR, 20th sess., Suppl. no. 14).

Since we did not interact at ground level with anyone from the UN, there was no way to immediately know there are binding laws against racial discrimination, yet still gleefully performed by hate driven people, and other cretin-like opportunists. Unless the 30 Articles on human rights are read and understood, it sits there only as window dressing. Why were populations in the Caribbean and Latin countries not educated about this? local governments watched us write about the associated evil and sought ways to destroy those who spoke out, to protect their income, instead of helping shut down this human rights crime.

While knowing the convention existed and could be used to punish racists, drastically erasing the generational, endangering fallout from centuries of aged misleading rhetoric and pseudo-science methodologies. Obviously, they did not want to rock their money train. Barbados, Guyana, Trinidad, Jamaica and others are amongst the biggest culprits that allow the use of racism as a weapon against Black Afrikan people, starting in the schools. Will we finally see this mental disease unveiled everywhere it tries to lurk in the future and no longer tolerated, or shielded. Which will in effect close off all the primary feeder avenues for corrupt dealings within parliaments. Effectively signaling the end of the progress-stagnating episode in multi-generational lives. Thereby issuing in a series of positive routes to advancement in its place.

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

The major political players tried everything to conceal The 30 Articles on The Universal Declaration of Human Rights (UDHR), proclaimed by the United Nations on December 10, 1948; that could have cleaned up these islands decades ago. It took us years to become aware the charters existed, and even when presented in a post to the public around 2016, the parliaments simply ignored the existence. However, they have known that the convention was translated into over 500 languages, no country can claim otherwise.

Including Afrika who is trying to secure a permanent UN seat, but also allow the conveying of human rights abuses to continue unabated. In the case of Latin countries and the Caribbean it will take a radical purge to end the socio-cultural deterioration, as it is deeply intertwined into the very fabric of societies and hovers like a heavy, poisonous laden cloud. I am of the firm belief that islands known as havens for racists should see the leaders who enable such social upheavals arrested, as they know it is illegal but show no responsibility, or remorse to uphold ratified laws to end the scourge, once pocketed gains are derived. We need to know, did Barbados ever ratify theirs, since they are known for neglecting such, and continue unconcerned. Some years ago it was noticed that the most important parts to the now suspended colonial constitution were missing those integral parts. While UN laws against discriminatory, violent practices against children dismissed.

Racist ideologies, such as eugenics and its many offshoots fueled and fast tracked the spread of slavery/human trafficking in all forms: ensuring longevity of the deep seated philosophy, and remains with us today: giving life to its refinement and ability to camouflage under many different names, and flexible, futuristic rebrandings. The latest and most egregious being "birth tourism," as the new bajan brainwave gifted, attempting to get it to evolve, and if allowed to continue, will impact the unborn in rotation for unlimited epoques.

Once the birthing process extends, meaning it can proceed on that course right up until an extinction event occurs. The fact that a wretched bajan mindset(s) could sit and devise a plan to imprison babies in vitro eternally, branded under slave codes, no more hot irons involved, but saw it as a brilliant idea nonetheless, and set it all in motion from Afrika to the Caribbean, lets us know infinitively. It is time to shut down the operations of the dead, monied-stained, political, black criminal consciousness. Who are now escalating into much wider areas that are definitively anti-human and off limits.

FOR THE SPIRIT OF KWANZAA

For our struggle in remembrance of those who have struggled on Our behalf.

For the Nguzo Saba, the divine principles which should Guide us in all that we do.

Excerpt taken from Spiritual Warriors are Healers by: Mfundishi Jhutyms Ka N Heru Hassan K Salim

© O House of Oduduwa Ile Ife the Black Afrikan
Queendom of Kush

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

All the tools are available to change the course of the future, yet it is extremely disturbing black politicians who pontificate on world stage platforms making themselves sound so genuine, and using that as a carefully crafted veneer. While performing for audiences, but will never lift a finger to touch any policy or provision that can impact or end their personal, self-sustaining business models.

Precisely because they sit near the bottom of the global food chain benefitting the most from inertia. The world cannot sit idly by and allow these events to automatically repeat and must act to end the new developments from cementing themselves into official instruments; by enforcing all applicable UN charters and declarations. This cannot continue, none of it is sustainable and has far reaching consequences once allowed to run amok.

Now that racist principles have been inextricably tied to human trafficking/slavery by the committee. Presenting evidence of small island states' collusion in neglecting to protect Afrikan descents while well aware there are instruments in place to do so: will also place the over ambitious parliamentarians directly in the path of civil litigation for dismissing the inalienable rights of Black populations in each jurisdiction, since 1962, 1966, and the other ensuing years, when they officially became full fledged managers of islands.

The Afrikan continent should also pay special attention to the wording of the published guidance, as slavery is still a terrifying staple for at least 10 million Afrikan people in varying countries, as reported. There have been generations of trained lawyers who should know better than to stay silent, but did anyway.

This has been the whole argument against the wrong people involved. Politicians from Afrika and the Caribbean seeking reparations while wholeheartedly aiming to remain drenched in the enormous profits concomitant, indefinitely. Then pointing fingers at European/UK countries but are comfortable with everyone else involved in the enslavement, and transporting of Afrikan people across multiple continents, and lands, within the last 1800 years, including themselves, to escape all legal scrutiny. As previously posted, none of them have the privilege to cherry pick who should pay reparations and absolve those they want to work with in future slaver endeavors. When all the known groups are culpable, and as descents of our ancestors who bore the brunt of their grand business plans. We demand that everyone answers and face the results of still ongoing handiwork.

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

While skimming through information on a platform recently, and saw where it was reported that at least "365,000 Lebanese have direct control over and make decisions for approximately 1 billion Afrikans on the continent," I did not follow up with any research, but know for a fact they are quietly taking over Cote d'Ivoire, aided by a procession of governments, and also violently terrorizing Ivoreans which is "attributed to the weakened leadership." We know the cold, calculating hatred that pours out of that group toward Black people. Therefore, it confuses those who can think and question motives about why majority Black countries from the Caribbean to Afrika did not see it fit to clean up every instance of human rights crimes, targeting Afrikans within countries, before charging out like bulls demanding reparations. Therefore, with any present track records as co-conspirators will need to pay affected populations, as well, the result of collaboration.

Every one of these countries are choc-a-bloc with lawyers, one can go nowhere without stepping on a few of them, yet, none see it necessary to intervene and seek counsel from attorneys versed in international law, among themselves or further afield, to end the horror show they all willingly cultivate. What makes it even more repulsive, we can point out ten and sometimes up to twenty lawyers sitting in various parliaments at any given time, satisfyingly sucking on taxpayers like well fed, fattened leeches. With another horde available at bar associations as extravagantly, taxpayer paid advisors, but obviously for all the wrong reasons.

Yet none can find the brainpower to see where all of it was about to lead or shut down the trajectory; once they remain beholden to prime ministers/presidents for jobs, titles, awards and advancement within certain circles: a virulent form of dependency. Some would say cowardice also plays a leading role. All of this confirms that a catharsis is long overdue to remove the offending infection, sanitize the taxpayer funded spaces, and must be excised at source with precision. The fact that after so many instances and lifetimes of freedom to sabotage the natural order, now everything has inevitably turned a corner, should come as a dire warning to those who believe they are invincible, immovable. Amun Ra

Why Does Racism Still Exist In Caribbean And Latin American Countries Against Afrikan Descents Despite A Legally Binding 1965 UN Convention?

This should give the local political criminal element in each jurisdiction, great pause, and initiate a review of previous and planned actions. Where commitments made to populations are overlooked in lieu of selfish undertakings. Which never aligns with mandates given or manifestos printed with immediately forgotten promises put on a shelf to gather dust. In Barbados' case, some of these false pledges are fifty years old, two lifetimes later, with different faces, many times from the same lineage re-installed. Yet politicians still appear with a straight face and pile on more deceit without fulfilling the previous thousand covenants made and broken.

Confident their clingy followers will never remember, and those who abhor the sight of the continuous refusal to meet commitments made to voters, will hardly publicly fight against the injustice, to avoid victimization. This is the reason talkmeisters carry, and exude such overconfidence in ignorance. They are yet to be pulled up at the rootstock and set in their proper place. The old overused, heavily abused excuse, "Massa made me do it," will no longer wash, not when they volunteer every generation like clockwork, and actually present themselves at every competing cat fight to accept dozens of awards in front of the entire global population for decades of loyal services rendered.

Conversely, it is still a mystery why Afrikan kingdoms or AU presidents would convince themselves or were helped along to believe that we, who reside in the Americas, will ever accept a continuation of the same old. When ancestors shortsightedly sold the very lineage that Afrika now needs, leaving the continent in an unenviable bind. It told us everything we needed to know. Caricom miscalculated for many decades in thinking they were going to last forever and no one could dismantle their very lucrative socio-economic constructs of division and inequality. No one took the time to view any of it from our perspective, too busy building more unnatural processes, not to enhance but to delimit, deny, and deprive descents. Sometime ago I asked one of the Elders, if Afrika has any clue how we are capable of shifting these threats into their deserved spaces once properly identified.

Hopefully, they can now read the tea leaves accurately before approaching us again. This time with better and more respectful intent, to achieve much easier, and positive outcomes The pompousness of those who inhabit voter's parliaments, as employees, in this area precludes them from that potential. We are way past the point of entertaining any more dilapidated political circuses carrying and attempting to offload debilitating anti-Black Afrikan programs: or allow any inferior modern forms of ancient possession concocted to reinfuse into our lives or that of our future generations again. Amen Ra

african
online
publishing

Kush Quarterly Magazine.

HOUSE OF DAVID AND SOLOMON
BLACK AFRIKAN QUEENDOM OF KUSH

© Copyright

The Mdw Ntr - Divine Words Of The Creator By An Elder

FOR THE SPIRIT OF KWANZAA

For the Creator, who provides All things great and small.

Amen Ra Na Swt Ntchr Aten Ra Neb en Ankh De en Nu Ankh Udja Seneb Amen Ma'at.

Excerpt taken from Spiritual Warriors are Healers by: Mfundishi Jhutyms Ka N Heru Hassan K Salim

