Pulling Away From Local Political Traps - Remembering Covid
By Empress Wuraola Oya

There is no doubt everyone remembers the Covid episodes and numerous roles played by the political ingredient within Caricom, in misleading populations to injure themselves and too many times, taking fatal doses of a vaccine not properly tested; now described as "a biological weapon." There is still an ongoing case in the Netherlands for those who resided at the very top of the vaccine food chain. This desire to deceive was driven by the promise of large amounts of money paid directly to said politicians. The sanctity of Black lives did not matter once they received millions.

Those terrible years from 2021 heavily outlined the lengths parliaments would go to protect tiny fiefdoms even if it means the death of families. Many learned they never were the primary concern, once there was a way for traitors in the midst to showcase mendacity, conceal insincerity, and take pride in the ability to implement skillful iniquity. We are now witnessing the massive fallout from the dangerous betrayal. The lesson learned should resonate for multi-centuries. None who present as political leadership can be trusted with Black lives at any time, and that has been the case since the 1920s. Made more profound when these types entered parliaments officially in the 1950s and the only portrayals offered until today.

The people at high risk of paying the ultimate price once they continue to succumb to such villianous wiles. Then to finally realize the errors associated with wilfull blindness, are a tiny group within communities who follow along like sheep and cannot see the steep cliff approaching. Some would say they deserve everything coming their way.

How many times must the weakest pay for believing the despicable products, in human form, specifically designed for conniving duplicity. How can anyone think it is safe to trust the disloyal, who never once demonstrated an ability to uplift as opposed to endangering whole districts once they exist below the poverty line, have less access to concrete knowledge, all of it knowingly created and kept in place by island management.

Pulling Away From Local Political Traps - Remembering Covid

They have had over seven decades to introduce equality and botched it miserably. Everything is now sinking into an abyss, and as they only have onshore controls over the unprotected, can do nothing other than the usual simulation, along with a grand show of sniffing around world power.

However, recent shifts in geo-political happenings should act as a guide to what is ahead. This will determine exactly what is being hidden, once eyes are glued to the way things have started unfolding, no unpleasant surprises should shock anyone. All distractions put on as a high school play must be dismissed forthwith to view the real show happening behind the facade moulded to artfully conceal the latest tyranny developed and unleashed.

Another instance of neglect tied to the uncaring, since these reports are constant and decades old. The trafficking has escalated and evolved to a state of normal, where participants simply ignore UN reports, and continue as though human trafficking is completely legal. Therefore, they have no need to worry about the umbrella body that houses declarations and charters explicitly targeting such crimes against humanity, and now over due for adjudication. We await the example made of such small jurisdictions believing international law does not apply to them, and they can continue undisturbed. No one has to repeat the risks and menaces to people in the Caribbean, and the Afrikan continent.They have always known the immense damage caused.

We understand with repulsion, why some are so desperate to dominate the Caribbean space and take charge as a fruitless leader otherwise. Where at least 30-40 million inhabitants have no clue they can easily be trafficked in either direction, the only thing at which the limited in anything wholesome excels at: the scourge of crimes and corruption against communities. With no more age-old hidden kidnappings of children to worry about being detected, not when all can be done, objectives achieved, goals met in broad daylight under any fraudulent government issued label devised: and criminally stamped as legal. In case no one is noticing, especially those mesmerized by stupid talk laced with a litany of voluminous lies coming out of Barbados incessantly. Local and international laws are invariably circumvented to accommodate new age slavery.

Those not paying rapt attention will feel the brunt of neglecting self and families for the stupidity of loyalty to colonial cult parties and politicians. Whose only fixation is to line their pockets with free money from whomever is paying, and say whatever is necessary to point populations in the opposite direction where they have no right being misled. For those still trying to figure themselves out and hopelessly believing island managers will ever reverse course. Unable to sense that survival and self-protection should be uppermost in most minds. If not, they have no one but themselves to blame. While all too well aware there has been no inclination to date from any parliament management to enhance the living conditions to any stages that surpasses that of their business partners, and the minority class who are allowed and enabled to live off Black lives like vampires since emancipation.

As a result, making everyone except for majority populations wealthy. Expect more of the same from leeches who know nothing else, and are overly obsessed with self-aggrandizement at the expense of everyone else, as they have something to prove, clinging to the lowest bottom rungs of the global ladder. Fortunately for people near and far, the entire plot was recently revealed in the US. They may as well stop wasting their breath vocally painting false pretty pictures for the gullible. Most people know what has finally arrived in the way of socio-fiscal hell, more lack of opportunities and the glaring, amplified worthlessness of local politicians, now there is no further need to camouflage anything.

The Black British, Caribbean and Afrikan Quagmire

As the back and forth increases between Black Americans and those who believe their opinions count, we have much to think about. While watching some of the Black British go after US Blacks when they cannot even open their mouths at any time to resist the British establishment, or make any changes for themselves. This shows how people who do not know their history and trapped inside a box, are disengaged and unable to escape, but react to what they perceive as a threat to long held day dreams. When none of it has anything to do with them, since how Black people got to the UK is an entirely different chronicle.

Equally amazing is hearing some Caribbean people spew the same sentiments but cannot promote any dissent or call out Caricom governments for destroying the social environment, and stubborn refusal to build strong Black financial networks, in fear of persecution to families still domiciled in individual areas.

The same applies to Afrikans who have so much to say but can say none of it to AU governments on the Afrikan continent about the wholesale damage wrought over many centuries and getting worse, which they all preside over. These three groups present as cowardly, and should come to the logical conclusion, it is now their turn to sacrifice themselves for the greater good and their future descendants, take one for the team. Since the ancestors of American Blacks already did so for many epochs for the benefit of everyone and to perfection.

Which has lasted formatively for over one hundred years and is still going stronger than ever because descents are proactive and do not waste energy being reactive or seek ways to demean or degrade what ancestors erected. Time to put hands and heads to the plough and demand the development of ancestral lands in the Caribbean and the Continent of Afrika. Black English should take note they cannot mandate anything of the UK. In Afrika and Caribbean's case, we know everything was wilfully stagnated to facilitate decades of corruption, the build up of poverty, oppression, instances of modern day slavery, suppression, permanent severance from ancestor leanings, and exploitation.

Unfortunately, and now exposed to the world, most Afrikans living in the west, and their Caribbean counterparts do not know the original names of their countries, are only familiar with the colonizer renaming, and are unacquainted with who renamed what, or when. This is a great source of major embarrassment, indeed ugly to watch, highly disturbing and very sad. Not surprisingly, continental Afrikans have found themselves in the same situation, not knowing enough of their Afrikan story. Had either of them known the enormity, would shy away from making videos, since it will now all cascade across media.

The Black British, Caribbean and Afrikan Quagmire

Apparently, although living in the west, a few of us know far more than either group do, which puts them in an awkward position. We can rest assured this will also get handed down to their offspring, as it obviously has for the last few hundred years, and the cycle continues unbroken. Once real Afrikan education remains out of reach and not reintroduced.

NIGERIAN questioned a Black American's identity and then INSTANTLY REGRETTED IT WHEN HE EXPOSED HER.

This under-education and scarily knowing nothing about self, rests solely at the feet of careless Afrikan and Caribbean leadership. Who refuse to do right by populaces and let them have their original story from the last few thousands years, starting in primary schools. A tonnage of statistics is available, as many of us did the requisite research ourselves and found it, along with a direct path to our ancients; but that is not part of current political plotting.

To everyone's dismay, UK Blacks, Afrikans and Caribbeans are left to feel humiliated when approaching people who know the Afrikan Story. While standing around looking bewildered after bringing up the subject and showing how ill-informed they really are, shameful episodes. We hope those involved are proud of their contribution to the total generational destruction of the Afrikan mind, the psyche. We are certainly not dazzled by any of it, or having to be the ones pointing out the unraveling.

Even worse, not only do people in Nigeria, a country renamed in 1914, not know their ancestral story either, but most also are not aware the real name of their ancestor's land is Khonsu Nok. The above video proves the political force knows the original history but refuses to share the data with over 200 million people.

Black Immigrants had to Come to the Realization they are not important to the American story

Now that delineation has taken full flight and shut down all schemes in place to use Black Americans to fight battles for British Blacks, some Caribbeans and Afrikans who continue shouting the loudest, but could effectively do it all themselves, as it is now their turn. They do seem quite capable given how they attack those who do not deserve any of the vitriol, and should save it all for the various governments responsible for the total mess in their respective ancestral habitats, right along with their local political leaders.

We are yet to see them do anything of that kind, but wake up daily to take out pent up resentment on Black Americans, even though it has reached the laughingstock phase. Whoever concocted this conspiracy did themselves a terrible disservice. Since their handiwork was futilely defeated, and only served to highlight the large cracks and deep fissures that exist, and should now aspire to close those gaps, making themselves useful for something for once in calculating lives.

This can be easily manipulated, not to mention the lack of adequate education within the Black family, that is exhibited by all three for everyone to see on a barrage of posted videos. Which contain weaknesses that can now be exploited to the fullest, as it is evident none are fully equipped to handle a fallout of this magnitude and gravity, and surely never expected such a wall of impenetrable resistance to the dizziness with which they have surrounded themselves and each other.

It was indeed heartening to see the young descendants of Black Americans on top of the predicament and professionally directing what comes next. The disrespect shown by those three groups to US ancestors only served to shine a light on the ignorance that still turns up, and lurking within.

The Black British, Caribbean and Afrikan Quagmire

The wasted time will be much better spent learning what is required to shape the future in ways that are relevant to survival. Arguing about who built what in the US when none were there except the ancestors of the current Black descents is counterproductive. Caribbean people did not play a major role in the US workforce until sometime in the 1950s. There were some from Barbados transported to the Southern US to spread the 1661 poisonous slave code behavior in the 1600s, but that was wickedness at its most gross.

Then there were those who emigrated from the West Indies in the 1700, 1800s, but not in droves. Afrikans did not arrive in the US in large groups until around the 1960s, centuries later. Therefore, the argument from newbies about being involved in foundation building in the US is just not true. The foundation was already there, forged by enslaved Afrikans, and those ancestors who were in the US thousands of years prior; by the time work forces from the Caribbean and Afrika arrived and grew to the millions documented there today, the US was already assembled. There is a huge difference.

Therefore, proceeding to rewrite history to create a new version of what really happened is psychotic, particularly when at a distinct disadvantage. When there is so much work to do, but first, those who are now debunked should take a short history course. Most of the crucial information is online, there is no excuse for not doing so, to upgrade from lack of knowledge to a semblance of knowing facts. Enough with trying to displace and replace Black Americans, just to steal the credit from your cousins to promote self, and massage egos. When, even if successful which is highly unlikely, none would know how to progress to protect heritage or maintain the fundamentals anyway, that takes special gifts passed down by ancestors: or would have done so in Afrika, UK and the Caribbean.

We know what Caribbean governments did with their people who were similarly blessed, it is well known, but exactly what did Afrikan governments do with their sacred lineages who existed before? Were they sold, muted or now extinct? Why do so many countries on the continent remain in such a state of despair and deprived of basics. When bloodlines know what to do, if still around to do so effectively.

We must ask, as the Afrikans who fled clearly could not defend themselves on the lands of their progenitors and had to run offshore seeking better. We can see they were not allowed to construct anything, and could never protest without grave harm, take back their birthright from the political elements in place who sell them out every day, or there would be no need to leave Afrika.

The Black British, Caribbean and Afrikan Quagmire

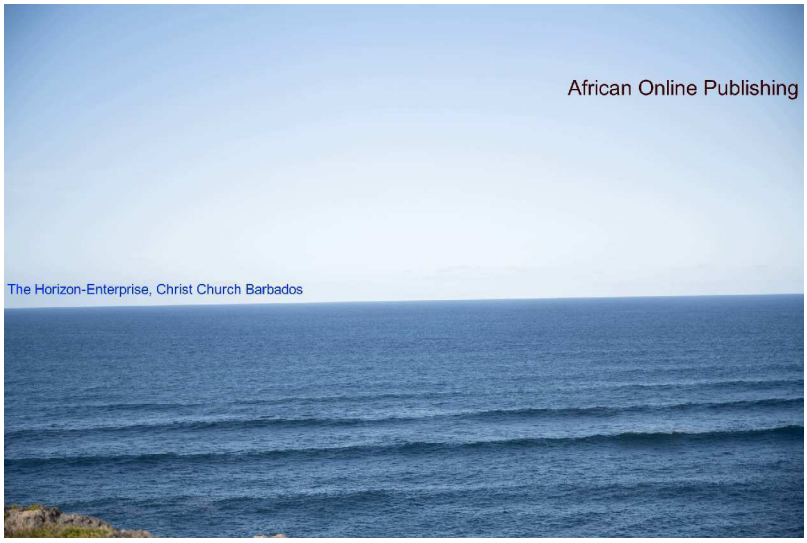

In addition, hopefully some realize where things have taken a turn in America. Those with a modicum of common sense would know what is ahead, coming at warp speed, and all focus should remain on that instead. This is the FAFO segment.

Everyone is responsible for their own safety, and with all the broad talk directed at those who look just like them. Will certainly get an opportunity to shout their objections from the rooftops, with attached megaphones and direct it at the US government, and see how well that works out.

Finally, all of this could have been avoided, if the shortsighted people had in the last 10 years put systems in place to cushion themselves, but instead seek to create malignant degeneracy amongst each other. None of whom will be able to regroup once the disarray takes hold.

Walking back this disaster in the last five years would have been the right thing to do, but no one cared, too busy believing this cockup was going to be a success Once it reaches the current stage where federal government policies on immigration is now being blamed on Black Americas, that is really the door of no return. Worst still, openly praying for Black Americans to be deported when they can only be deported to the US is worthy of a straitjacket.

After all of that, then those who instigated the escalating rhetoric and confusion will simply withdraw and disappear in a spineless procession leaving their uninformed imps holding the empty bag. The oblivious fittingly cannot see the distraction while busily setting traps for themselves for which they will never escape, by attempting to bring everyone down to their lower level vibrational frequency of unawareness.
