Who Is Protecting Afrikan Children On The Continent From Slavery - Are We Supposed To Accept Ancient Barbarity?

By Empress Wuraola Oya

All who were involved in capturing selling, buying, transporting and enslaving our Afrikan ancestors for centuries. This also includes the Afrikan continent, must pay reparations:

"The committee is calling on States to implement comprehensive restorative justice, combining compensation, restitution, rehabilitation and structural reforms. The passage of time cannot serve as a pretext for States to refuse to recognise these historical injustices or to adopt “appropriate measures of restorative justice and accountability for these crimes”, according to the committee. Comprising 18 independent human rights experts elected for four-year terms, the committee’s main task is to examine the periodic reports submitted by member countries on the measures taken to combat racism and discrimination.

Who Is Protecting Afrikan Children On The Continent From Slavery - Are We Supposed To Accept Ancient Barbarity?

We have long read about dark ages rituals, customs, traditions, but could never fathom the depth of such retrogressive behaviors that belong in the era of living in caves, and are too primitive for the 21st century. More information became available in the last few years, totally alien to our individual cultures as a people targeted for tyranny daily, and which we had to find ways to avoid to recover from the trauma.

Since knowledge was widely concealed, that was a world we could never imagine, and find it unappealing. An abomination and threat to humanity, just like slavery. It was difficult enough taking care of family day-to-day, and could never visualize giving birth to our children then sacrificing them for the sake of a money-making ceremony, abandoning them at the altar of the murderous. Where limbs are separated from small bodies, as sacrifice.

After being subjected to all manner of evil rained down on us from criminal parliaments. It would be hard pressed to envision how people could still believe they are doing no wrong in 2026 and sensitize themselves to such savagery against children and adults. Then with a straight face talk about wanting reparations from the western customers of their ancestors; after the historical crimes of selling children, including everyone else captured and sold to the west.

Then chose to never stop the horror show, but evidently intensified the slaving and human sacrificing of each other, in-house. Therefore should have no argument when viewed by the west as a continent to enslave into perpetuity, because leaders keep it that way. We rebuke this unwanted curse on our earth. Amun Ra

It is highly disturbing, and unfathomable to hear the village chief relay the norm in Ghana in the below video:

Who Is Protecting Afrikan Children On The Continent From Slavery - Are We Supposed To Accept Ancient Barbarity?

Even harder to digest are the recently published existence of baby breeding farms in some Afrikan countries, and the terror females endure. With the combined never built, crumbled infrastructure to complete an assessment; that there was not the least attempt to upgrade the quality of life for hundreds of millions of Afrikans, although literally having the means, and multiple centuries at hand. Indicating to us that leaders are too impotent to adequately protect Afrikans on or off the continent.

Our enslaved ancestors were subjected to breeding farms in the US and the Caribbean, particularly after the abolition of slavery in the 1800s. The fact that this is fashionable in Afrika tells us the continent remains in the throes of slavery. What manner of people have normalized this level of brutality on women, children and then act like it is business as usual, no big deal, and see absolutely nothing indictable.

This is unacceptable, and hopefully will not be transferred to this region. Where we already have two-legged beasts in cabinets thrilled to continue what they recently started with Afrikan partners and expand outwards on an even larger scale, as none of this is new to them, and practiced at a much smaller scope in the last one hundred years. Families on the island can attest they have had children and young adults disappear over the years and are still untraceable. Since this has been brought to everyone's attention, obviously people of this area must be cautioned of the extreme dangers attached to engaging with new partnerships that have in the last seven years officially combined forces.

Afrikan presidents must understand you have to be able to protect Afrikans on the continent in all areas first, both socially, financially with the best available opportunities, and top-tier education created in Afrika as a priority, before setting them loose on the world. These things never materialize out of thin air, augmented knowledge must be obtained and applied. I am sure the shortcomings are suddenly glaring since the massive backlash, the result of unnecessarily provoking the delicate situation.

The statistics revealed by a Black American living on the continent explains completely why some predatory Afrikan behavior emigrated to America and immediately targeted Black Americans. There is absolutely no doubt that Afrikan presidents are 80% to blame for what they cultivated and unleashed. Once again we must thank Black Americans for traveling to Afrika or we would never know what is being hidden from us again:

Adult people interested have a choice and can make their own decisions, but not the unborn and newly born now targeted, or small children being trafficked into this region under false pretenses. With mothers offered distorted dreams of ending up in bigger countries given to them by liars for politicians. The threat has already started, we knew nothing of these things before, and only found out in the last few years the west has its own version as well, the information is still leaking out slowly. However, Afrika's rendition of modern day slavery is no less evil, yet they point fingers and are unable to clean up the voluntarily established immoral filth that has become sinking sand.

Caribbean people can no longer say they do not know, especially with clips showing bags of children rescued from being taken to open slave markets in individual countries circulating on media, a daily occurrence. Where most are never found and sold everywhere. We saw two plane loads of children, mere babies, being spirited off the continent to who knows where, for what, some years ago. That video shook us into cold, stark reality, and is still stuck in our minds. The captured batch was fortunate the European pilots were caught and arrested. While they were rescued and reunited with duped parents. How many other flights were more successful over many decades is the lingering question.

Caribbean politicians cannot say they are unaware of these crimes, of course hoping we never find out so they can parade around with their mouths filled with even more lies, while pretending they are in charge. When the people should have been told about existing perils that still lingers in Afrika against Black people.

How could Barbados, now a spreading stain and decay on the earth again, claim they have a region to take care of, a psychotic fantasy in swollen heads. Everyone knows they are too toxic, and good for nothing other than extreme darkness, when keeping that and much more away from populations, as participants. Very few who do not carry sound minds would ever want deceitful, illegal types in their lives, imposing themselves on the people, and reshaping the future for re-enslavement.

Once both violent heinousness are not immutably eradicated from the two continents, no one is safe. It is unsettling to think anyone would enforce newer versions of the same principle attached to these injustices in the lives of future generations still, over 500 years later. We are not dismissing the hundreds of years of challenges coming from the west, but neither is Afrika innocent.

Yet, we also see areas where development and progress should have been the natural order of things. Even more discomforting neither the AU nor kingdoms mentioned to descendants in the Caribbean while on the jaunt to the Americas, the existence of practices associated with anti-human harmfulness.

Everyone involved in rebuilding mechanisms for our descendant's future decline can rest assured these trespasses against Black humanity will not be tolerated in the Americas, there will be push back. We already have more than enough problems to battle and will not accommodate even more perilous add-ons on our children: just because Afrikan presidents and kingdoms neglected to bring light to our continent.

With political occupiers around this area being enduring opportunists, they have no value, and will fail the people once again, as usual. Take notice, we can seek international relief, that includes having such criminal minds arrested for any invading intrusion in the Caribbean, should the dangers increase and persist: and make absolutely sure, every name is exposed across the globe as celebrity slavers.

We already had to witness sex tourism aimed at children, and young people for too many life intervals, before understanding what that was all about; and recognize the reprobate political wickedness that just recently reached Afrikan shores, blanketing nearly the entire continent. Where the young and helpless are subjected to being sold to tourists, making daily living hazardous and putting everyone's health and life in jeopardy:

However, Namibia seems to be actually working at fighting the scourge that has poisoned our area for over a century, but unlike islands like Barbados, are initiating workable systems to make arrests and protect victims. We fully expect Caribbean politicians to hide such vital happenings from us, and in their usual style of dysfunction as co-conspirators, do nothing to clean up the social environment, as they have refused for three lifetimes. While knowing the central roles they still play generationally in societal degradation, from the 1920s, as front men/women. Afrikan presidents had a duty to let us know what to expect on the continent.

Since shamelessly seeking our endorsement for a reparations bid, without acknowledging our birthright entitlements, a set up, another mark against them. While working overtime to convince this diaspora that somehow they care, and sounded hollow, because of the alignment with, and close proximity to the lethal bajan element.

Inclusive of the now well known mistreatment of Black Americans, still playing out on social media, a very public affair. A challenge they will never win, after miscalculating. Thankfully, it has now gone viral that the risk is too great, the tribalism in Afrika too unhealthy for anyone from the Americas returning to Afrika to do so without security. Much better investigations carried out are essential before accepting invitations, or embarking on such a journey.

As Caribbean people, some of us do not appreciate social media mouth pieces owned by politicians speaking out on our behalf about reparations, or anything connected to our right to make personal decisions, without oral or written permission. We plainly see the usual destructive hands at play in the last two days. Doing so is an insult, disrespectful and a step-down for us and our ancestors. I suggest these platforms end this new flim flam sham immediately. Stop the attempt to drag some of us into more politically devised failures.

After thousands of misguided years, tribalism has failed spectacularly in Afrika, will never work or reach the same fatalistic degree in our Americas and should not be transported here or anywhere else ever. We have come to the conclusion, never believe in or listen to the hypocritical drivel Afrikans now trying hard, but failing to dominate Black Americans spew. As the newest immigrant arrivals to the Americas, where 50 years, two generations is not nearly enough time to claim prowess, not when some Afrikans and their Caricom counterparts are actively trafficking unborn and newly born Afrikan babies into the Caribbean.

In the meantime, continental Afrikans are in the US projecting they are masters at child rearing, and shamelessly giving unsolicited advice that no one needs. When their children in Afrika are dragged around like animals and sold in crocus bags at slave markets. Hence the desperation to flee Afrika and perceive anything as better and a new start, is understandable. Although knowing they wield anti-child weapons as a slaver continent, they have big talk for Black Americans. The time has arrived to permanently eliminate the slave trade in Afrika, along with the ugliest of images illustrated, and seen around the globe, but only if they are willing and open to learning something other than life-destroying depravity.

NYC Africans Never Expected THIS From Black AMERICANS

It is instructive this is not an overnight achievement, the desire to take the place of Black Americans requires many more lifetimes, but by then everyone would have moved into the future by another 10 generations or more: leaving the hopefuls trailing far behind. Due to unequal enlightenment, the unreachable spaces that are farther ahead, all out of reach. The heightened prototypical intelligence found in certain groups at elevated levels, that most continental Afrikans are yet to find or absorb, and never will, if they do not seek.

When already having completely surrendered the inner being, the spiritual ancestral soul to enemies so long ago, lost their way and made no effort to get back on track, regain ground, while ambushed, therefore no recovery. There can be no catching up when intellectually static and conquered for over six decades, and thousands of years before that, far beyond what is required.

The same situation in which Barbados, Caricom politicians found themselves, as the equivalent to Afrikan village chiefs, hired or chosen, and not going much of anywhere, while restricted, unless there is direct succession to a throne, which is highly unlikely in most instances. A tribulation steeped in self-reduction for severed populations who like to follow, mired in the muck, a self-created predicament when politicians chose to deceive over the protracted period and cannot move beyond the present layout.
